Crosby: I said some bad words

Admits to using unprofessional language, denies sexual harassment allegations

BY DAN HILDEBRAN
Dan@BcTelegraph.com

Former Starke City Chief Administrative Officer Jimmy Crosby admitted to using profanity but categorically denied claims of sexual harassment leveled against him in a report commissioned by the city of Starke.

Crosby made his comments in a written response to the Telegraph, which is included below.

The Telegraph has offered me the opportunity to respond to the investigation. My first instinct was to go through it piece by piece pointing out what was clearly false and explaining the many parts that are misleading or have another side to the story. After wrestling with this, I don't believe we could ever come close to the truth without knowing who is making the allegations, under oath, in order to evaluate motive, which can probably only be accomplished by way of litigation.

With that being said, I must address two of the most inflammatory sections: First is the section on the language used in conversation with Drew when I became frustrated or angry. The investigator, at one point, asked me if I thought the language was "

professional." I shared the following story with her: When I came home from college one day, at the dinner table, I used the word "pregnant." And my father corrected me and said, "Son, I think you can find a better word than that to use at the dinner table in front of your mother."

So, were the words "professional?" No, but sadly, they are words used today, I've noticed, more and more by professionals in certain situations, often under stress or when frustrated. Because of my age and rearing, I'm uncomfortable, and feel shame when my usage of these words is called to my attention.

This section I had anticipated being an embarrassment because it happened. It was unbecoming of me and it is that of which I am so ashamed.

What I didn't anticipate was a section on sexual harassment. That section is simply not true. I denied making those comments to the investigator and I still deny making them.

I conclude by saying the Lord has blessed me, as unworthy as I am, yet I continue to fail Him. Bridling my tongue and controlling my ego will be worth enough for what time I may have left.

Report: Crosby fostered hostile work environment in Starke City Hall

BY MARK J. CRAWFORD
Mark@BcTelegraph.com

Former Starke Chief Administrative Officer Jimmy Crosby created a "hostile work environment" during his time at city hall, according to an investigative report released July 24.

The report, conducted by attorney Meagan L. Logan of Douglas and Douglas Law, documents a pattern of bullying, retaliation, manipulation and inappropriate conduct involving multiple employees and city operations.

The investigation began following public accusations made by Commissioner and former City Manager Bob Milner during a May 6 city commission meeting. Milner called for Crosby's termination, citing a culture of fear, ethical violations, and interference with city operations and elections. Crosby was placed on paid administrative leave. He resigned before the investigation concluded.

Despite the resignation, Logan was asked to complete the report, which focused on two allegations: creation of a hostile work environment and unauthorized formation of a recreational advisory committee.

The second allegation was quickly dismissed. While the idea of forming a committee with city, Bradford County and Tourist Development Council representation was discussed at a TDC meeting, Crosby did not form such a committee without the commission's input.

The third issue raised by Milner, Crosby's prior criminal history and failure to have his rights restored prior to taking office, was determined to be insufficient grounds for termination.

Meridian, others make annual requests for financial assistance

BY MARK J. CRAWFORD
mark@bctelegraph.com

At the July 1 Bradford County Commission meeting, Meridian Behavioral Health delivered its annual update, highlighting the organization's impact on the community and formally requesting continued funding support for the coming fiscal year.

Ashley Brooks, chief operating officer of Meridian, presented on behalf of CEO Lauren Cohen. Meridian, a nonprofit behavioral health agency, has served North Central Florida for over 50 years, providing a comprehensive range of services across 14 counties.

"It is our ambition to transform our communities together from the inside out," Brooks told commissioners.

Meridian's services in Bradford County include primary care, mental health, crisis intervention, substance use treatment and telehealth. Telehealth has expanded access to care, with 738 Bradford County residents receiving a total of 4,543 telehealth services so far this year.

"This permits individuals faster access to treatment and allows them to be seen in the comfort of their own home," Brooks explained.

The agency's data demonstrated its reach:

- 66 adults and 36 children received acute care services.
- 482 adults and 299 children received outpatient treatment.
- 109 adults and 75 children received psychiatric care.
- 30 adults and 51 children received mobile response team services.

Brooks also shared a success story of a 38-year-old client who overcame methamphetamine addiction, emphasizing the life-changing impact of Meridian's programs.

Meridian is required by Florida law to generate local matching funds to secure state and federal support. For the upcoming fiscal year, the agency is requesting $83,018.25 from Bradford County — the same amount as last year — to meet its statutory match for Baker Act services. "The state is responsible for 75%, and we are required to ask the county for 25% of those Baker Act match dollars," Brooks said.

Commissioners discussed the possibility of receiving quarterly updates from Meridian, rather than annual presentations, to better track the agency's work and outcomes. They also expressed appreciation for Meridian's efforts, particularly in connecting with the county jail and supporting individuals transitioning back into the community.

Brooks thanked the commission for its ongoing support, which has enabled Meridian to expand services, including hiring a dedicated clinician for jail-based substance use treatment. "We look forward to continuing to work with you all," she said.

The commission is expected to consider Meridian's funding request as part of its upcoming budget deliberations, along with other agencies that have presented.

Requests for county assistance took place over two meetings, June 17, July 1 and July 17.

ACORN Clinic

Medicaid and cash, and does not receive federal funding.

ACORN requested $25,000 in funding from the county for the upcoming year, which is $1,250 less than the previous year's request. Executive Director Tina Lloyd explained that the clinic loses $83 for every patient seen, but she emphasized her commitment to fundraising, grant writing and cost-saving measures, and highlighted the critical role of dental care in preventing broader health issues such as heart disease and pneumonia.

Her enthusiasm for and success at fundraising, including for school supplies and cancer research, drew commentary from commissioners, who hope to learn and benefit from her example.

Community for Schools

Cindy DeValerio, executive director of Bradford Community for Schools, presented an update, highlighting the organization's mission to support students by surrounding them with a caring community, aiming to empower them to reach their full potential.

The program is a strong dropout prevention initiative, serving students in grades 6-12. In the past year, all 26 seniors in the program graduated, achieving a 100% graduation rate. Nine scholarships were awarded, including two named for Cheryl G. Canova.

Community for Schools runs several support programs, such as after-school clubs, mentoring, resource referrals, a resource room for clothing and supplies, a weekend backpack food program, and an Angel Tree program.

This summer, they employed 20 high school students in partnership with local businesses, providing work experience and pay at $13 an hour.

The budget request remains

2025 "Pink Ladies" Banquet: A time for recognition and remembrance

Lt. John Townsend and Gertrude Griffis announce the winner of the raffle: Joan White. The raffle for a large gift basket, which included cash and donated items, was the auxiliary's summer fundraiser and raised over $1,100.

BY MELISSA PYLE
Special to the Telegraph

The unwavering faithfulness of volunteers and local emergency workers was celebrated at the Bradford County Auxiliary, also known as "The Pink Ladies," annual banquet on July 8 at the Woman's Club of Starke.

The banquet is traditionally held to recognize the group's volunteers, their hours of service, and money raised. Volunteers accumulated 7,500 hours of combined community service within the past year and are known for their dedication, kindness and life-saving donations.

President Linda Johns spoke about the significant impact the group has had in Bradford County throughout the past, noting that the "Pink Ladies" mission statement is "To render services, provide public relations, and provide financial aid to the health care missions approved by the auxiliary." She said when the hospital closed the group was no longer known as the Shands Pink Ladies Auxiliary but kept the "Pink Ladies" nickname and refocused their efforts in working with the sheriff's office.

The money they once raised to give to the hospital for needs, is now poured back into the community in various ways. Just one past example was purchasing the county's first jaws of life extraction equipment. Currently, the group has ordered new first aid equipment for patrol cars.

One of the most important services the group currently provides is wellness checks. These checks are a free service for home bound or elderly residents and has saved lives. If a person falls or is otherwise incapacitated, a missed wellness check call will immediately alert local authorities to send a deputy to the home and make sure the resident is safe. Residents are encouraged to tell friends and neighbors about this service and can sign up by calling the sheriff's office.

The event included the announcement of this year's scholarship recipient. The auxiliary offers an endowment scholarship with Sante Fe College. The scholarship is available to anyone preparing to go into the healthcare field and this year's recipient is Neo Addison of Lawtey.

During the banquet, members took a moment to reflect on the lives of two faithful members who have recently passed away; EulaMae Carlton who passed away in December of last year and Ruby Crawford who passed more recently in March. Each was recognized and honored with a memorial table and by their families, who were in attendance.

The banquet was also time for the auxiliary to recognize member's service hours and to install the 2025 officers: President Linda Johns, First Vice President Charlotte Williams, Second Vice President Loretta Edwards, Recording Secretary Virginia Lindsey, Correspondence Secretary Gertrude Griffis and Treasurer Linda Hildebran.

Johns concluded with a word of encouragement for the attendees and a challenge to spread the word about the program and especially its dire need for new volunteers. Johns emphasized how volunteers are a vital part of the Bradford community and are needed for the success of the organization's future mission.

"The road to success for our auxiliary is always under construction," she said.

Anyone interested in volunteering for any amount of time can contact the sheriff's office to fill out an application form or call Johns directly at 904-263-0399.

Auxiliary members display their hours of recognition with a decorative bookmark. ## CROSBY though it was also noted in the report.

The rest of the report examines complaints about Crosby's leadership.

'Manipulative,' 'controlling' and 'bullying' behavior

Logan interviewed more than 20 current and former employees and business associates, many of whom requested anonymity for fear of retaliation. Witnesses described Crosby as a narcissistic and controlling figure who ruled through intimidation. One employee called him "manipulative, evil and controlling," while others described "walking on eggshells" and avoiding Crosby on bad days to minimize confrontations.

Crosby defended his management style as one driven by high standards and pursuit of excellence. He acknowledged using profanity, including "damn," "hell" and worse but said it was not directed at anyone specifically and was comparable to language used in PG-13 movies.

Yet employees recalled screaming, slammed doors and even having to apologize to customers who overheard Crosby's outbursts from the city hall lobby. One employee compared Crosby's behavior to tactics used by prison inmates to divide and control others.

Crosby was also accused of threatening employees' jobs, boasting that it took "four votes to fire me and only one to fire you."

Targeting and undermining staff

The report documented instances where Crosby attempted to isolate or force out employees through reassignment, public belittlement and psychological pressure.

One example centered on longtime city employee Terry Anderson. Despite her 30-year tenure, Crosby reportedly referred to her as a "trainwreck," cut her department staff and denied her raise requests. When attempts to push her out failed, he transferred her to Finance Director James Hughes and then to General Manager Drew Mullins with the instruction to "fire her fat ass." Both men refused.

Mullins, who became general manager after the city split administrative duties between him and Crosby, was also a frequent target. Employees described Crosby as regularly undermining Mullins and psychologically wearing him down as he sought more control. Mullins and Hughes were said to have received the brunt of Crosby's anger.

'I am the commission'

Crosby is said to have boasted about manipulating city commissioners and controlling the direction of the city behind the scenes. "I am the commission," he reportedly told staff when challenged about unilateral decisions. He allegedly threatened high-ranking employees with commissioner votes for termination and claimed to have compromising information that would assure him one commissioner's vote.

Employees alleged Crosby selectively disclosed or manipulated information presented to the commission to sway votes. In one case, they said he pushed to disband the fire department and asked staff to alter financial data to justify the move. One employee recalled him saying, "Treat 'em like mushrooms — keep 'em in the dark and feed 'em shit."

Crosby was also accused of directing employees to influence independent boards. In a zoning case, staff said Crosby asked them to pressure the Planning and Zoning Board to vote against a family's application because it did not align with his interpretation of code, despite disagreement from the building department.

Election-year interference

The report also outlines

how Crosby allegedly delayed ordinances, such as building fee increases, to benefit sitting commissioners seeking reelection. Though Crosby admitted to a roughly three-week delay, employees said the issue sat dormant for over a year. Crosby claimed he acted alone, without direction from commissioners, and was using good judgment by not placing controversial decisions before the commission so close to qualifying.

Additionally, staff reported being ordered to avoid citing properties in Reno, a neighborhood within Commissioner Janice Mortimer's district, especially during election years. Employees also described a ride-along with Mortimer where citations were targeted based on property ownership.

Mortimer and Commissioner Scott Roberts were also implicated in efforts to terminate Anderson.

Discriminatory comments and harassment

Numerous allegations of sexual harassment, racism and ageism also surfaced. Male employees said Crosby frequently commented on the appearance of female coworkers, remarking on their physical attributes and thoughts about having sex with them. Though Crosby denied such remarks, employees said women were often informed of them secondhand.

A resignation letter from former employee Kayla Young cited gender-based bias, pregnancy discrimination, and the withdrawal of previously approved paid time off.

Crosby was also accused of racial insensitivity. In one case, he referred to a Black male employee as "boy," prompting a complaint from another staff member. He later apologized, stating he used the term because the employee was younger. Multiple witnesses said Crosby commented he could "get [Black employees] for cheap," which he denied, claiming he was highlighting systemic discrimination.

While the report noted the city had become more diverse under Crosby's tenure, it also detailed allegations of preferential treatment for friends and retaliation against employees for associating with former Police Chief Jeff Johnson. Seeing Anderson and Johnson together, Crosby allegedly commented she "needed new friends and would have to choose between her career or her friends."

Legal and professional findings

The investigation concluded that Crosby's behavior met both the subjective and objective standards required to establish a hostile work environment under federal law.

"Mr. Crosby's actions permeated virtually all facets of city employment," Logan wrote. "From the frequent use of profanity to disparaging comments and interference with job tasks, the misconduct was not the rare or occasional utterance or harassment courts typically reject."

Logan noted the "astounding" consistency of complaints among those interviewed and called for the city to consider hiring a professional to handle employee relations, citing improved morale since Crosby's departure.

Logan emphasized the importance of transparency and leadership moving forward.

"The city should ensure that positive morale continues to prevail while establishing stability and transparency in a new and effective leader," she wrote.

Mullins commented: "It's unfortunate that an investigation had to be conducted. It's my goal that we continue to move the city forward every day improving critical infrastructure needs, economic development, downtown improvements, street repairs and the quality of life for our residents and visitors alike. We all want to see our city move forward to prosper and be the best it can be."

— Pam Whittle, president of the North Florida Regional Chamber of Commerce, requested $9,375 in funding from the county for the upcoming year, the same amount as last year. She emphasized the chamber's long-standing partnership with the county, its role in supporting local businesses, and its economic impact through events like the Strawberry Festival. The chamber operates with minimal staff and relies on a combination of membership dues, workforce board funds, TDC payments and county support to continue its work in promoting economic development and community engagement in Bradford County.

— John Williams, director of the Arc of Bradford County, requested continued funding support from the county to help meet the required local match for state funding of their day programs for individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities. The Arc provides a range of services — including residential care, day programs, transportation and mental health support — to Bradford and surrounding counties.

The county's contribution — $15,000 — has historically accounted for about 40% of the Arc's required 12.5% local match for state funding. Williams emphasized the Arc's positive impact, both through direct services and initiatives like food distributions and hosting a Community Health and Wellness Resource Hub.

— UF/IFAS Extension Agent Lizzie Whithead requested $2,500 for the annual 4-H and FFA Beef Bash. The event, which had around 550 attendees last year, brings in visitors from north Florida and Georgia, benefitting local businesses. It also provides an opportunity for youth to showcase their beef projects before the fair, she said. There were more than 100 exhibitors at this year's event.

— Scott Koons requested membership dues for the North Central Florida Regional Planning Council in the amount of $5,810. He also requested $3,000 on behalf of Visit Natural North Florida, which was $1,000 more than last year due to an increase in tourist development tax revenue.

Vote on funding

Commissioners approved funding requests at the current year's levels, resulting in no increases. Exceptions were the ACORN Clinic, which voluntarily reduced its request, and the Bradford Cowboys, as that money will go toward the county's new recreation budget.

BUDGET

unchanged at $3,750.

Economic Development Corporation

Northeast Florida Economic Development Corporation requests $10,000 annually to support its work. The EDC has focused on strategic planning, business recruitment, marketing and building partnerships to drive economic development in the region. Amber Shepherd summarized some of the activities, including:

- completing an economic development strategic plan with a go-to-market strategy, supported by a $75,000 Community Planning Technical Assistance Grant.

- implementing digital marketing outreach, including sending over 9,000 LinkedIn messages to business leaders and following up with more than 15,000 additional messages, to attract businesses considering relocation or expansion.

- investing in a GIS planning tool for their website, which provides detailed demographic and commercial property information to prospective businesses.

- attending and representing Bradford County at various conferences and trade shows, such as CES in Las Vegas and SpaceCom, as well as state and regional economic development meetings.

- supporting and promoting new business developments in the county, such as Wawa, Racetrack and the upcoming Starke Auto Mall.

- targeting hotel chains for potential investment, in response to local needs.

- submitting a large site in Bradford County for the Florida First Sites grant project, which could bring additional marketing support for attracting manufacturers.

Bradford Cowboys

Rodney Mosley, representing the Bradford Cowboys Athletic Association, requested $15,000 in funding to help cover the rising operational costs of the county's longest-running youth sports program. He highlighted that the program, which has served the community for 50 years, uses funds for essential safety equipment, uniforms and overall operations, but still falls short of its annual budget.

Mosley emphasized the vital role youth sports play in building life skills, leadership and camaraderie, and in keeping kids engaged and out of trouble. He noted the decline of youth sports programs in the area, stressing the long-term positive impact on the community. He expressed gratitude for the county's past support and encouraged continued investment in youth recreation.

Mosley was supportive of the county starting its own recreation program. He said that youth sports would run better if all programs were unified under one umbrella, as they were in the past, and encouraged the board to keep pushing for recreation funding and not to put the idea "on the back burner." He emphasized the importance of such a program for the community and the positive impact it would have on local youth.

Soil and Water Conservation District

Amy Morie from the Bradford Soil and Water Conservation District requested $5,000. The board is made up of elected members involved in agriculture who contribute their time bridging service gaps and supporting conservation. Among their activities, they:

- facilitate communication and collaboration between agencies, landowners and the public on conservation issues.

- organize educational events, landowner tours and workshops on best management practices for soil and water conservation.

- provide technical advice and assistance on land management, invasive species control, and water quality concerns.

- conduct water quality sampling and increasing public access to water data.

- support flood protection efforts and planning to expand surface water monitoring through additional gage stations and volunteer programs.

- organize youth development activities, such as soil and water contests, and providing educational outreach to local 4-H and FFA groups.

- host public events with interactive exhibits and educational materials, including tree seedling giveaways.

- assist with local mitigation strategies and supporting agricultural best management practices.

- offer owner/operator education and helping landowners access cost-share and technical assistance programs.

- maintain a public website for information sharing and compliance.

Other presenters included: — Brittany Spangler from Episcopal Children's Services requested $3,750 to support its local Head Start program, the same as this year.

— Matt Pearson from the Suwannee River Economic Council requested $6,463 to support health, nutrition, transportation and other services for senior citizens. This is the same amount as this year.

— Glenda Ruise and Kate Ellison requested $15,000 on behalf of Concerned Citizens of Bradford County, which would help cover the cost of insuring the RJE Complex where its many programs for youth, senior citizens and the community take place. The request was double the amount received this year.

HOW TO GROW IN CHRIST JESUS

Last week we talked about growing and developing spiritually. We covered the fact that just as a baby needs natural nutrition to grow and develop properly, a person that has been born-again also needs spiritual food to grow and develop as a Christian. If a person is ever going to fulfill the plan and purpose of God for their life, they cannot remain baby Christians. Baby Christians are ready for heaven and the rapture because they are saved but they will become much more useful to the Kingdom of God and the church of Jesus Christ as they mature. The goal for the new Christian is to renew the mind and develop their spirit man until the Holy Spirit through their recreated human spirit begins to dominate their life and lifestyle. Here is one truth that many Christians never come to realize and that is the fact that they are composed of three (3) parts: spirit, soul and body. Until a person is born-again that person has been dominated by darkness and an unrenewed mind that has been taught by natural human reasoning and life experiences. For instance, the Bible tells us in Ephesians 2:1-3 "And you He made alive, who were dead in trespasses and sins, in which you once walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince and power of the air (Satan), the spirit who now works in the children of disobedience (lost humanity); among whom also we ALL once conducted ourselves in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind, and were by nature children of wrath, just as others." Now you should have a clearer understanding of the importance to do what Paul tells believers to do in Romans 12:1-2: "I beseech you brethren by the mercy of God, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world, but be you transformed by the renewing of your mind, that you may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God."

I want to remind you that in this passage of scripture Paul is not talking to unbelievers but believers. Notice that he does not address the spirit but he addresses the body and the mind. Why? Because the spirit has been reborn, recreated, but you still have the same body as well as the same mind that you had before you were saved. Now Paul is telling the Christian that he/she has to do something with their body and mind. He said we must present our bodies to God and we must renew our minds. The spirit of the Christian has to be fed, the mind of the Christian has to be renewed and the body of the Christian has to be kept under submission and/or control. This sometime is not easy, but it is possible and of necessity if we are to enjoy the benefits and the victory that our Lord Jesus Christ provided through His death, burial and resurrection. The sad thing is, many Christians do not know that they are supposed to grow up and mature in Christ, and even fewer know what spiritual steps to take in order to grow and develop and become partakers of their Blood bought, God given inheritance. I will be in no hurry, and if you will read this article each week I will share with you some important steps that will teach you how to walk in faith and in the Spirit and how to enjoy your spiritual progress. Until then, may the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit be with you.

Starke city clerk's race

Heeder says the woman for the job already has it

BY MARK J. CRAWFORD
mark@bctelegraph.com

Lisa Heeder's decision to run for city clerk was simple: she wants to keep her job.

The position of city clerk has been vacant since the resignation of Jimmy Crosby in March 2024 and duties formally placed in the hands of the city's manager on an interim basis. Most city commissioners favored removing the clerk as an elected official from the city's charter, but that was a decision only voters could make, and they disagreed in an April referendum.

The position may have been vacant for more than a year, but the office was not. And while the manager signed official documents, it was Heeder single-handedly running the clerk's office.

As administrative assistant for more than eight years, first in the city manager's office, and since in the city clerk's office, she knows the job.

"One of the most important roles of a city clerk is being a calming voice in adversity, displaying a caring and trustworthiness to the residents seeking help. I have maintained a true open-door policy for years, coming out to the lobby and speaking to customers to assure their experience was resolved," she said.

With responsibility for finance no longer under the clerk's umbrella, Heeder said the role includes working for the public and the city commission. She provides customer service, and access to public records,

Lisa Heeder

It is her role to record and archive those files. She attends meetings and documents them, keeping recordings and creating the minutes. Whether correspondence or contracts or any slip of paper pertinent to city business, the clerk's office is responsible for maintaining the file and making them available in accordance with Florida's public records law.

Unless a customer's issue is related to utilities, Heeder tries to resolve things to the customer's satisfaction. Business licensing in the city is also her responsibility.

"I'm very customer service minded. I believe that that's incredibly important that we treat our citizens like they should be treated," she said.

Heeder considers among her most important duties keeping commissioners informed and prepared for their role. That means providing background necessary about anything on the agenda. She assists them in other ways as well, such as making travel arrangements.

In other words, if voters elect her, she will continue doing the job she loves, maintaining the positive connections she has with commissioners and others in city hall.

"I've held multiple roles in the city that have required unique skill sets and a strong knowledge of city functions that I will carry over in the future. We have a solid team of employees that have maintained a positive and caring attitude. I continue to serve the citizens, no matter the need," she said.

She described her relationship with the commissioners as excellent and included Commissioner-elect Dimple Overstreet in that group. She also included General Manager Drew Mullins and his assistant Kathy Bradley, saying she still performs much of the utility reporting that she began when working on that side of city hall. And she gave a nod to the finance department as well.

"Everybody, we have a really good relationship in city hall," she said.

An elected office is inherently political, but Heeder said she is not one to pick sides. She is a listener who wants to take what everyone has to say into account.

Outside of her role at city hall, Heeder is an active member at First Baptist Church, performing administrative

Thompson wants to add a new hat to her collection

BY MARK J. CRAWFORD

Chrissy Thompson believes Starke's city clerk should play an essential role as a public liaison and government watchdog.

Thompson said she wants to bring fresh leadership, transparency and a renewed sense of community engagement to the role, believing the job is more than administrative in nature.

She is well known as a local business owner and community servant, but many years ago she served on the city commission as well, a role she stepped away from in 2002. She sought guidance when deciding to run for office again.

"I have prayed and prayed, and I have served in a lot of different capacities, served in a lot of different things, and just feel led to serve," she said.

Thompson thinks the city clerk's office needs new energy and a liaison who can bridge the gap between the public and city government. She also emphasized the importance of checks and balances, ensuring that no single branch holds all the power and that the public's interests are always represented.

She said she sees the city clerk's role as more than a record keeper or compliance officer. She envisions the role as someone who ensures transparency, facilitates communication and maintains accountability. She advocates for the clerk to provide all commissioners with the same information at the same time, fostering fairness and informed decision-making. She would also like to host regular town hall meetings to gather citizen input and relay that to the commission.

With a successful business background, Thompson said she will bring a practical, budget-conscious mindset to her candidacy.

"When you don't have the money, you don't spend it," she said, stressing the need for fiscal responsibility. She believes the city should be run like a business, with careful budgeting and a focus on serving taxpayers' needs. Even if the clerk no longer controls budgeting and finance, she wants to serve as a guardian on behalf of the public.

"I think that the more business minded we are, the more successful the city will be," she said.

Thompson's experience as a former city commissioner gives her insight into the importance of cooperation and neutrality when working with other city leaders. She is committed to working with city commissioners and maintaining a nonpartisan approach, she said.

She also knows there are times when you can't make everyone happy or tell them what they want to hear. She's been honest while campaigning that the clerk won't be able to lower anyone's utility bill or clean up the city through code enforcement. But she said she can keep those concerns in front of those who can.

Thompson wears a lot of hats, and, if elected, she plans to remain deeply involved in local boards and organizations supporting education and other causes. She will continue to balance managing her business and community service. She has delegated responsibilities at her restaurant, Downtown Grill, which will allow her to focus on being city clerk, if elected. She assured voters of her dedication: "I do plan to give the city 100%, and I do know it is a full-time job. ... Just like always, I don't require much sleep."

She is passionate about encouraging voter participation and ensuring that every voice is heard, especially in elections with typically low turnout. "Everybody seems to have a voice until it's time to vote," she said, concerned that an election with single race on the ballot might easily be overlooked.

Supervisor of Elections Amanda Seyfang is conducting the election, which will take

Huntley Redfearn Sr. came to Keystone Heights and made it his own

Celebrating 100 years of Keystone Heights history

BY TRACY LEE TATE
Special to the Monitor

This story first appeared in the April 13, 2000, edition of the Monitor and has been updated.

Some of the most prominent Keystone Heights community members were not born and raised here but chose to live here as adults.

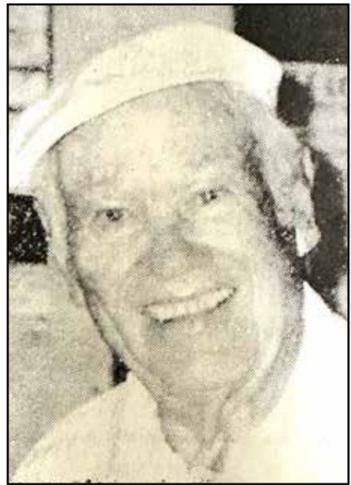

Huntley Redfearn Sr. came to the Lake Region as a young man in his 20s from Coral Gables.

"The war was still on, and I was working in an aircraft plant in Miami," Redfearn recalled. "My wife, Kathy, and I had just had our third child. Her family had moved to Live Oak, but she hadn't seen them in about four years. That was how the war was; it dismembered all relationships. We took the train with the baby, leaving the other two boys with my mother."

Recruited by brother-in-law

"My wife's sister, Aggie, was married to Al Watson, and they picked us up at the station and drove us to Live Oak," he continued.

Redfearn said he had been considering moving with his family but had also considered finding a place around Atlanta, perhaps a cabin in the mountains. Instead, Al talked him into moving to Keystone Heights and starting his own business.

"Al had bought a building and owned the only grocery store in town then," the former Coral Gables resident recalled. "I set up a variety dime store in part of the building. I had never been in retail before, but I ended up as the owner of Redfearn's Variety Store."

While he had no experience as a storekeeper, Redfearn was no stranger to working for himself.

He said he grew up in poverty after the death of his father from a stroke when he was two years old.

"Until I retired, I had not been out of a job since I was 11," Redfearn said. "I started out working as a delivery boy for a drug store, making $5 a week.

During the war years was the only time I didn't work for myself."

Redfearn said that when he was growing up, no one could even think about owning their own home until they were in their 50s, but Franklin Roosevelt changed everything.

"Roosevelt did more for the general population of the United States than any other president," Redfearn said.

"His programs like the FDIC, the FHA, and the CCC made things so much better for working people. I was making $1,200 a year when I got married and we got along fine on that."

Redfearn said that the money he had saved during the war years helped him keep going during his early years in business. He said there was nowhere to spend the money he made, so he saved it. It came in handy, as he said he didn't begin to be successful with his store until 1961.

Cutting-edge tech: T.V. and air conditioning

"I got into appliances after the war and became a Hotpoint dealer," Redfearn said. "I had the first dishwashers and televisions in Keystone, both in my home and in the store. When there was a Gator game on TV, I had a house full of fans there to watch.

I set a TV in the window at my store, with a speaker outside for the sound, and people would come and bring chairs and sit and watch."

Redfearn said his real success came with the advent of air conditioning and especially the heat pump.

"Air conditioning hurt tourism in Keystone Heights because people didn't have to travel here anymore to escape the heat," Redfearn said.

"When heat pumps came out, the other heat and air conditioner men in the area didn't want to deal with them, but I did. It was the first time I realized a profit in the service business."

Remembering the early days

One of the real passions in Redfearn's life has always been golf. He smiled as he remembered the day in 1948 when enough local players got together to play golf and resurrected the Keystone Golf Course. The men sold timber and put up fences, cleared away the mess made on the course by cows and rooting hogs, and made some sand greens. He remained an avid golfer through much of his life.

When asked about the changes he has seen in the community over the years, Redfearn clearly remembers them.

"When I came here, three cattle gaps were coming into town," Redfearn said. "If you drove to Starke at night, you had to be careful of cows in the middle of the road. They gathered there because it was warmer. There were only two telephones in town: one at Lindsey Walker's service station and one at the Keystone Inn."

"Lawrence Boulevard was the only paved road in town, and it was lined with trees. The only church in the city was the Community Church. Kathy had trouble getting two tables of ladies for bridge."

Raising a family in Keystone Heights

Redfearn was one of the charter members of the Keystone Heights Rotary Club, which was formed in 1948. He remembers many people whose names are now legends in the city's history.

"I think my secret is that I have been acting like a kid all my life," Redfearn said.

"When I play golf, I often play with much younger players, and I love to bet on the games and cut up and joke around with them. I have always found a way to enjoy life. I have never regretted coming to Keystone Heights. This is, and was, a great place to raise children. I think my boys all benefitted from growing up in such a wonderful place. I know I have benefitted by living here."

Redfearn and Kathy had four sons, three remaining in the area. At the time of her death from Alzheimer's disease, they had been married for 66 years. Huntley Redfearn, Sr. died in 2003 at the age of 90.

Mac Johns rails against 'swamp-division'

Union County Commissioner Mac Johns

BY DAN HILDEBRAN
Dan@BcTelegraph.com

The developer of Liberty Farms gained approval from Union County commissioners for a preliminary plat and construction plans during the commission's July 21 meeting, but not before Commissioner Mac Johns railed against the development, declaring that the neighborhood would ultimately cost the county money.

He said that other neighborhoods developed 10 or 20 years ago are now a burden on the county.

"I mean, it's still a swamp-division anyway," he said of the site, inferring the acreage was low-lying. "You look at it, Liberty Farms, it sounds good. People from out of the state (are) going to be buying it and they're going to be mad. They're going to sell it. People can't get to their homes when it rains. So, they're going to be complaining (to) their commissioner, and the commissioner's going to get tired of hearing the complaints, and the school bus can't get down there, and before you know it, our county motor grader's going out there and working here and loads of lime rock. That's costing us a ton. Just like some of these roads now. I don't like it."

County Attorney Russ Wade informed commissioners that the developer is exceeding the minimum standards for roads in the plans.

Commissioners approved the plat and road construction plans for the site near County Road 229.

After the vote, developer Pete Scerbo told commissioners, "We'll do our best as a steward to make sure that it's the least amount of burden, negative burden on the county. I hope that it brings some tax dollars, and it turns out to be a benefit as opposed to a burden."

Dad was seeking custody of kids when Mom killed him

BY DAN HILDEBRAN
Dan@BcTelegraph.com

The Starke man shot by a woman at Starke's Auntie Lil's Daycare last Friday was seeking custody of two children he had in common with the shooter.

According to the Bradford County Sheriff's Office, Mindy Osteen, 34, shot Christopher Jones, 37, while the victim was in his vehicle, and the couple's two-year-old son and one-year-old son were in the vehicle with their father.

Sheriff's Maj. George L. Konkil, Jr. said that in a video he viewed, Jones exited the vehicle after the initial rounds, and the 34-year-old chased him, eventually to the front of the daycare, where Osteen shot him again.

The victim later died at HCA Starke ER.

Osteen was arrested for homicide, child cruelty, possession of a weapon by a convicted felon, and larceny.

According to court papers, Jones filed paperwork at the Bradford County Courthouse beginning in November 2024 to establish paternity of the two boys.

Wanted custody on weekends

On November 19, 2024, Jones filed a petition to determine paternity and for related relief.

In that document, he stated that he and Osteen were together from July 2021 through November 2024, and that the couple had one son in August 2022 and a second in November of the following year.

On the same day, Jones filed a proposed parenting plan under which he would have custody of the boys on the weekends.

Sister tried to get Osteen Baker Acted

In December 2024, Jones filed an emergency motion for child pickup. In the motion, Jones stated that the children were in immediate danger of harm because of the mother's mental health.

"The mother's mental health is not well," wrote Jones in the motion. "(Her sister) called me on Dec. 13 to come pick up my sons because the mother, Mindy Osteen, was having a severe mental breakdown. She doesn't even know who her father is."

Jones wrote that he took the children with him on the evening of Dec. 13. The following day, after Osteen called the sheriff's office, he returned the boys to the sister's home in Sampson City.

"Her sister...told me that she does not trust Mindy Osteen to be alone with our boys because of her current mental health situation," Jones continued, adding that the sister was trying to get Osteen involuntarily committed for an evaluation under Florida's Baker Act.

However, at the time of Jones's petition, his paternity had not yet been established, and his motion was denied.

Mediation failed

In January 2025, Circuit Judge George Wright ordered the couple to undergo mediation to resolve their differences. However, the following month, a mediator reported that the effort did not result in an agreement.

The mediator noted that Jones attended the session with a lawyer and Osteen represented

herself.

After the failed mediation, Wright set a non-jury trial date of September 18.

Victim: 'Help me please'

One week after Wright set the trial date, Bradford Sheriff's Deputy Kyle Mozingo said he received a dispatch to Auntie Lil's Daycare on Starke's Washington Street regarding an armed white female.

Monzingo reported that he arrived at the facility at 6 p.m. and found Jones "lying in the doorway of the day care bleeding profusely from what appeared to be multiple gunshot wounds."

The deputy also made contact with Osteen, who was on the ground in handcuffs, clad in a Bonefish Grill uniform.

Mozingo wrote that after putting the suspect in the back of his patrol car, he started interviewing witnesses.

One woman told the deputy that while she was strapping her child into a car seat, she heard three or four gunshots.

"(The witness) advised that she saw a blonde, white female, wearing a white Bonefish Grill shirt and black pants, standing by a car with a gun in her hand, shooting at a white male in his vehicle," wrote Mozingo.

The woman added that she then saw the victim run from the car and toward the building, holding his chest, with blood on his shirt.

"As Christopher entered the daycare, (the witness) observed Mindy following him with the gun," the deputy reported.

The woman said she then heard two more shots coming from inside the daycare. The witness then drove to the other side of the block to protect her child and called 911.

Moizinger then interviewed another eyewitness, who told him she saw a black SUV blocking the roundabout, and a woman in a Bonefish Grill shirt pacing around the vehicle.

"Then she saw her strapping (redacted) in the passenger back seat," the deputy wrote. "(The witness) advised she began walking up to the front door of the daycare and saw blood, and the door closed...The door swung open, and she saw a white male laying on the floor, covered in blood, reaching out his hand and stating, 'Help me please,'"

As the woman fled from the building, she saw a deputy approaching and told the officer that someone was on the floor and that children were still inside.

Moizinger said Jones was transported to Starke ER, where he was pronounced dead at 7:03 p.m.

Shooter: 'You got to die, Chris.'

until 8 p.m. for sixth-eighth grade. A Meet-the-Teacher Night will be hosted by Lake Butler Elementary School on Thursday, Aug. 7, from 6 p.m. until 8 p.m.

Orientation events set for KH schools

Prior to the start of the school year, Keystone Heights High School will host an orientation for incoming seventh-graders and new

Det. Logan Hough wrote in the same report that he viewed a video of the incident recorded on a doorbell camera. He gave the following account of what he saw.

"I observed Christopher pull up to the daycare front door at approximately (5:47 p.m.). Christopher then walked into the daycare to retrieve (redacted). At (5:50 p.m.) Mindy walks up to the front door with a backpack and stands between the front door of the daycare and Christopher's vehicle."

Hough added that the daycare owner walked the children out of the building, and their mother hugged and held them.

Jones then walked out, loaded items into the vehicle, and strapped the children into car seats. Osteen followed and watched.

As Jones got into the driver's seat, Osteen stayed back by the passenger's side back door.

"Mindy then walks around the back of the vehicle as she approaches Christopher, she has her hand inside the backpack she is holding," Hough reported. "Christopher is sitting in the driver's seat with the driver's door opened. Mindy walks directly up to Christopher and fires three shots as she backs up slightly. She then walks back up to Christopher and fires two more shots. Christopher can be heard screaming."

Osteen then jogged out to the front of the vehicle, and Jones ran to the back. The woman then approached Jones again and fired a round toward him in the direction of Bradford High School.

Jones ran to the building for cover, but after opening the daycare's outer door, he found the inside security door locked, trapping him between the two doorways.

"Mindy appears to be trying to clear a malfunction in the firearm," Hough wrote. "She then gets the malfunction cleared and goes into where Christopher was trapped. Mindy then fires three more shots at Christopher. After the third shot, Christopher stops screaming."

The gun appears to jam again, and Osteen is seen walking in front of the daycare while her children are heard screaming from the vehicle. Unable to clear the malfunction, Osteen walks back to Jones's vehicle.

"Mindy then places the firearm in the driver's seat of Christopher's vehicle as she says, 'Please let the monster die.' She then repeats it as she opens the rear door where (redacted) are located."

Hough said Jones then paced back and forth between the daycare and vehicle, before finally walking up to her victim, unarmed, and addressing him.

"You got to die, Chris. You can't kill (redacted)."

Christopher then says, "Help me."

Mindy then says "Chris you can't kill (redacted)". Chris then says, "I'm not killing nobody".

Hough reported that Osteen then walked away from the door and down the steps.

Moments later, deputies arrive. Cpl. Trenton Lovell is one of the first to arrive and goes to Jones, who tells him Osteen was the shooter.

"While other deputies arrive," Hough wrote, "Mindy can be seen walking around. Mindy then walks to the front of Christopher's vehicle and puts her hands up and says, 'I'm right here, y'all. I done it in self-defense.'"

BRADFORD COUNTY, FLORIDA
NOTICE OF HEARING TO IMPOSE AND PROVIDE FOR COLLECTION OF
NON-AD VALOREM SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS TO FUND FIRE PROTECTION SERVICES AND FACILITIES

The Board of County Commissioners (the "Board") of Bradford County, Florida (the "County") is considering the levy of annual non-ad valorem special assessments to fund the costs incurred by the County each year in providing fire protection services and facilities. The special assessments would be imposed with the "municipal service benefit unit" depicted on the enclosed map which generally includes all of the unincorporated area of the County, plus the incorporated area of Lawtey, Hampton, and Brooker. The City of Starke is not included in the proposed assessment program. The fire assessment, if adopted by the Board, would be imposed to fund fire services for the County's fiscal year which begins October 1, 2025 (Fiscal Year 2025-26").

Notice is hereby given that the Board will conduct a public hearing to consider adoption of a Final Assessment Resolution related to the provision and funding of fire protection services and facilities. The Final Assessment Resolution will approve the fire assessment rates for Fiscal Year 2025-26 and collection of the assessments pursuant to the tax bill collection method for such fiscal year and each fiscal year thereafter. The assessment is an annual assessment that will continue from year to year. The hearing will be held at 6:30 p.m., or as soon thereafter as may be heard, on August 21, 2025 in the Commission Chambers, 945 North Temple Avenue Starke, Florida 32091. All affected property owners have a right to appear at the hearing and be heard with respect to the proposed fire assessment and to file written objections with the Board within twenty (20) days of this notice.

The assessments will fund a portion of the costs incurred each year in providing fire protection services and facilities throughout the MSBU. The assessment for each parcel of property will be based upon a calls for service methodology wherein costs associated with fire protection services and facilities are allocated among different types of property according to historic fire incident reports and call data. For Fiscal Year 2025-26, the assessments will be imposed against residential property on a "per dwelling unit" basis at a proposed rate of $167 per dwelling unit, against non-residential (commercial) property based on the square footage of all structures located on each parcel at a proposed rate of $0.11 per square foot, and against vacant, undeveloped parcels at the rate of $46.50 per parcel. Properties owned by government entities, churches and non-profits would be exempt from the fire assessments. Agricultural property will not be assessed unless the property contains a residential dwelling unit, in which case it will be assessed on a per dwelling unit basis at the rate specified above. For future years following Fiscal Year 2025-26, the rate of assessment may be increased by up to 4% per year without further notice.

The fire protection assessment will be collected on the County's behalf by the Bradford County Tax Collector pursuant to the tax bill collection method authorized by Section 197.3632, Florida Statutes, commencing in November, 2025, and include collection costs incurred by the County and have been adjusted as necessary to account for the statutory early payment discounts which apply when collecting the assessments annually on the same bill as property taxes. The fire assessments will be imposed solely by the County and not by the Tax Collector or Property Appraiser. Any questions concerning the fire assessments should be directed to the County Manager's office at (904) 966-6327.

A more specific description of the fire protection services and facilities and the method of computing the assessment for each parcel of property are set forth in Resolution No. 2025-05 (the "Initial Assessment Resolution") adopted by the Board on July 1, 2025. Copies of the Initial Assessment Resolution and the preliminary Fire Protection Assessment Roll are available for inspection at the office of the County Manager, located at 945 North Temple Ave, Starke, FL 32091. If a person decides to appeal any decision made by Board with respect to any matter considered at such meeting or hearing, he or she will need a record of the proceedings, and that, for such purpose, he or she may need to ensure that a verbatim record of the proceedings is made, which record includes the testimony and evidence upon which the appeal is to be based. In accordance with the American with Disabilities Act, persons needing a special accommodation of an interpreter to participate in these proceedings should contact the County Manager at (904) 966-6327, at least 48 hours prior to the time of the hearing.

Students working summer jobs through Community for Schools

The nonprofit, Bradford County organization's goal is to help students overcome obstacles, experience success and graduate

BY CLIFF SMELLEY
cliff@bctelegraph.com

Bradford Community for Schools is all about setting up students for success in life. One way of doing that is putting them on track toward graduating, while another is to give them a taste of a work environment.

The nonprofit organization offered a summer employment program for the third straight year, with 20 students taking part this year at a total of 10 job sites: Bradford County Public Library, Bradford High School, Downtown Grill, Florida Twin Theatre, Headstart, Home Sweet Bone/Grooming by Sister, Hometown Grounds, Lake Area Physical Therapy, Nicky's Beauty Bar and Young Hearts Extended Assisted Living Facility.

Other employers who had agreed to participate were

"It's giving them employability skills," said Community for Schools Executive Director Cindy DeValerio. "It's, of course, building self-esteem, building character and teaching them skills. Also, they can use the hours (working) as community service toward scholarships. They're also building a resume."

Preston Clem, who's set to begin his senior year at Bradford High School, is all about anything that'll help him get scholarship money. Plus, he also gets the benefit of being around dogs. He loves dogs — he has four at home — so the chance to work at the Home Sweet Bone boarding business and its related Grooming by Sister business was a perfect opportunity for him.

Preston Clem helps this dog get dry after a wash at Grooming by Sister.

Clem's responsibilities included giving the boarders at Home Sweet Bone food and water and taking them outside. At Grooming by Sister, he got to wash and dry dogs.

Elijah Lawrence prepares drinks for customers at the Downtown Grill.

Future employment opportunities may not have Clem working with dogs, but he views his summer experience as kind of a head start in life.

"I think it can help me with getting future jobs," he said. "I now have job experience in general. Also, if I have a dog of my own, I now know how to take care of him."

Home Sweet Bone Owner Dawn Strickland said, "I cannot say enough about the importance of this program. It exposes kids to the workplace when they otherwise would not have had a chance. It's almost like a test run in a field to see whether they would enjoy it."

Students in 10th-12th grades mostly as well as some who've just graduated participated in the program, working 15 hours a week and earning money provided through a grant from Northeast Florida Career Source.

"The big thing for those employers is they're not at risk of losing anything because the grant funding takes care of what (students) get paid," said Ken Weaver, one of Community for Schools' student-support specialists.

Strickland described it as a "win-win" situation for local businesses.

"Yes, you do have to take the extra time in training because these young adults typically don't have a lot, if any, work experience," Strickland said, "but they are also an extra set of hands at no financial cost."

The students surely enjoy making some money, but the benefits, of course, go beyond that. DeValerio said students are building a rapport with members of the community they will one day be a part of as adults if they don't move away.

"They're building a lot of things other than just a paycheck," DeValerio said. "It's not just about a paycheck."

That's true for Ta'laysia Cummings, who recently graduated and worked this summer at Hometown Grounds.

Mariah Williams worked this summer at Young Hearts Assisted Living Facility.

"During the summer, I learned how to better manage my time, communicate with confidence and stay committed to my education," Cummings said. "It helped me stay motivated and reminded me that I'm not alone in this journey — that there are people who believe in me and want to see me succeed"

Students, who selected which participating business they wanted to work at, first had to meet with their employers and become informed of what was expected of them. DeValerio said students were told that if they couldn't commit to the job's obligations, they were to be honest with employers and tell them.

DeValerio said students taking on job responsibilities, which include calling your employer if you're going to be late or unable to come in, is like an early start to adulthood.

"I think that kind of takes you out of your high-school fun world," DeValerio said.

The job site, of course, can provide fun of a different sort, like Clem getting the chance to be around dogs. However, students do get to see that not every day at work is necessarily enjoyable. They may also learn that a certain type of job is not what they want to do in the future.

"I think it's good for them," DeValerio said. "They're figuring out that jobs are not always fun, but they've committed to it. Jobs are not always exciting, but sometimes you have to do what you don't like to do for a little while to figure out what you do like."

Weaver believes working on a job and taking it seriously will benefit students in school.

"It's that motivation factor," Weaver said. "The job helps them to understand how they have to really invest themselves if they're going to be successful."

Strickland encourages employers who haven't participated to do so in the future.

"Working with everyone in Community for Schools is such a pleasure," Strickland said. "I just hope that more employers will take advantage of the opportunity, not just to help themselves, but to help a student become a productive, working member of the community."

Agape Murungi spent her summer working at Nicky's Beauty Bar.

Ta'laysia Cummings, who worked at Hometown Grounds, said Community for Schools "gave me access to mentors, support and resources that helped me stay focused on my goals and inspired me to keep pushing forward, no matter what challenges I faced."

Resources, support for student success

Bradford Community for Cayson Hampton shelves books as part of her summer job at the Bradford County Public Library.

Schools is dedicated to helping at-risk students improve and putting them on a path toward graduation. At-risk students can be those who have no interest in going to school and have no one supporting and encouraging school performance.

As student-support specialists, Weaver and Martha Boyette interact with BHS students on campus, serving as mentors, providing support and encouragement. They may also help students get the resources they need, either directly or by acting as liaisons with other organizations. Maybe a student simply needs a kind word on a given day. Maybe a student needs something to eat, a jacket to wear during winter or personal-hygiene products

Community for Schools' office space on campus can sometimes simply be a place to take a breather for a few seconds.

"Come in and take a break from life," DeValerio said.

Think of Boyette and Weaver as teachers' assistants. Teachers may be the best people on campus to see what needs students have, but they have only so much time in a class period.

"There's no way a teacher can really invest themselves completely in every student they have in all their classrooms," Weaver said, adding that his experience with Community for Schools "has opened my eyes a lot more to the extreme challenge that educators have."

Community for Schools' mission is to connect with students buy surrounding them with a caring community of support and empowering them to reach their full potential and achieve success in life. The organization's vision statement is to provide a supportive environment centered on student improvement and success. Though adult mentorships and community resources, students can realize and reach their full potential.

Partnerships with educators, businesses, healthcare providers, social-service agencies, volunteers and other resources and programs help Community for Schools provide that assistance to help students overcome the life challenges that hinder their academic success.

Weaver said the first student he talked to upon becoming a student-support specialist was a senior who wasn't on track to graduate. The student told Weaver that he viewed school as a waste of time.

That was this past January. Weaver's mentorship and the help of guidance counselors resulted in that student not only changing his attitude about school, but graduating in May.

"He's reached out to me a couple of times this summer just to say hello," Weaver said, adding that the student has asked for his assistance as he wants to pursue employment in a trade job.

This past school year saw all 26 seniors served by Community for Schools graduate.

"I can't say enough good things about our Bradford County Community for Schools and all they do for our students," Bradford County Superintendent of Schools Will Hartley said. "Everyone involved in the organizations goes above and beyond to meet our students' needs and ensure their success."

"They are truly a meaningful asset to our school community."

DeValerio said she'd love for Community for Schools to have student-support specialists at Bradford Middle School, but that'll take additional funding.

Dream Pilot Media: telling sports stories and more

BY CLIFF SMELLEY
cliff@bctelegraph.com

Want to relive that touchdown you scored, that 3-point shot you sank or that home run you hit?

In today's world, it's easier for high-school student-athletes to see their highlight plays, thanks to technology and a platform in social media in which to post them, but it takes someone to step up and make it happen.

Enter Dream Pilot Media, a venture started in 2021 by Latoya Chandler (a 2001 Bradford High School graduate) and Stefan Nichols (a 1995 BHS graduate) that creates videos set to music, giving high-school kids something maybe they wouldn't experience unless they were fortunate to play collegiately or professionally.

When he was a BHS student, Nichols could read about himself and see photos of himself in the newspaper, but actually watching plays unfold was something he and other student-athletes didn't enjoy.

"It was just something I never had growing up in Starke," he said. "Graduating in 1995, there was no social media. You just had a whole bunch of VHS tapes."

Dream Pilot Media, which also takes still photos and produces graphics work, began as a hobby, really, but it led to paid contracts with school booster groups and other organizations.

"I never went into it thinking, 'Hey, I'm getting ready to start a media company,'" Nichols said. "It wasn't until we started getting a whole bunch of taps on the shoulder from high schools and different organizations like the North Florida Suns. It was like, 'You need an LLC, and we can pay you.' I was like, 'Well, I guess we've got a business now.'"

"I'm not going to say we were forced into being a business. It was kind of a nice, friendly nudge to go ahead and become official."

The overall goal, though, remains the same — to give back to young student-athletes and others in the community.

"We've done more stuff for free than we've gotten paid for," Nichols said. "Honestly, I wouldn't have it any other way."

From community events to athletics

Dream Pilot Media really got its start on a whim, with Nichols deciding to buy a camera and learning how to use it and getting tremendous help from Chandler.

"She taught me the ins and outs as far as how to operate the camera," Nichols said.

Then, it was simply improving as he went.

"I'm not going to say everybody should adopt this, but if you keep trying something long enough, eventually you'll start to pick it up," Nichols said. "You'll figure out an easier way to do things or smarter ways to do things the next time."

Nichols and Chandler first began chronicling community events. Then, the requests started coming in.

"It turned into doing a few videos here and there for a few couples for weddings," Nichols said. "Then, somebody asked us, 'Hey, do you do baby showers?' I was like, 'Well, I guess so.'"

"It was like one job after another. It was something we had never done before, so we just said, 'You know what? Let's try it?'"

Eventually, the decision was made to try capturing moments from BHS football games.

"I just wanted to give kids an opportunity for exposure," Nichols said.

Nichols, Chandler and Brenton Ruise cover various athletic events from all angles. At a football game, for example, Nichols said he'll typically use a camcorder that can zoom in from long distances, so a lot of times he'll stand in the back of one of the end zones, while Chandler and Ruise work the sidelines.

"If one person misses a play, the other person has it," Nichols said. "A lot of times, people ask us about a play: 'How did you all switch angles?' 'Well, we've got three different cameras.' We may splice a play together from three different camera angles to make it look cinematic."

Nichols also has a DJI pocket gimbal, which is good for getting close-in shots. He'll use that to get footage of a team huddling on the sideline with a coach or for interviews.

"The coaches are very helpful," Nichols said. "They know what I'm there for, so that makes it a lot easier."

Editing and producing a finished highlight video after a football game tends to be a long affair.

"We burn the candle very late on Friday nights and into Saturday morning," Nichols said, adding that the work can last until 3 a.m. to 4 a.m. on Saturday.

You won't find Dream Pilot Media at Bradford athletic events only. The crew has also done work or has been asked to do work for schools in Union County, Baker County, Columbia County, Middleburg and Williston.

Dream Pilot was contracted to do work for the BHS football program last year by the Bradford Touchdown Club, resulting in working all home games and a few away games as well as gathering footage from practices.

Other paid jobs have included working with the North Florida Suns basketball organization as well as the Lake City Vipers youth football organization. Nichols said he especially enjoyed the Lake City Vipers job, which involved covering a big tournament at the University of Florida.

"That was a dream come true for me because since I started filming, I've wanted to actually film a Gators game," Nichols said. "It wasn't quite a Gators game, but I was there at Ben Hill Griffin (Stadium).

"That's one thing on my bucket list, to hopefully get on the sideline for the Gators."

Opportunities, achieving dreams and telling a story

Though Dream Pilot Media moved toward covering athletics, it's still involved in non-sports work. Nichols said Dream Pilot has done projects for mosquito-repellent company Thermacell, which has a research center in Hampton. Other jobs have included working with real-estate companies and assisting BHS in its attempt to get funding for parking by providing aerial-drone footage.

"It just shows that if you have the means to do media, there are all types of avenues you can go down," Nichols said. "You don't even really have to do sports."

One project, which was kind of sports-related, but really more a labor of love for someone many people in the community know, was producing a video for Roger Crews and his love of paintball.

I think I had more fun than Roger," Nichols said. "Roger was tired. I don't think he understood that when you're actually filming, you have to do several takes. It was hot out there. He had all his gear on. I think he was relieved when it was over with, but I had fun."

In looking toward the future, Nichols said he'd love to have contracts with various universities, but said that his ultimate goal is to create his own TV channel that would be available for content creators.

"I want to have a platform where people can have their short films or docuseries or whatever else they are going on," Nichols said.

That would tie in to how Dream Pilot Media got its name. People have dreams, and Dream Pilot Media is the "pilot" that helps people turn their dreams into reality.

And if someone's dream is to go into some type of media, Dream Pilot's creators are willing to help. Nichols said he'd like to give shadow opportunities to youth. Perhaps a young person will one day be part of a new Dream Pilot Media-type venture.

"I can't do this forever," Nichols said.

Helping youth is something Nichols enjoys, whether it's giving a student-athlete a cool-looking highlights video with Dream Pilot Media or talking to Bradford High School students about their future in his "real job" as a Santa Fe College Achieve specialist.

"I'm on the high school campus almost every day throughout the week," Nichols said. "I pretty much just meet with kids, and I talk to them about their career exploration and, really, just life. The truth is, not everybody's going to go to college. You just talk to them and make sure they're actually on a path where they're setting up options for themselves."

Stefan Nichols is pictured getting video footage of a July 3 meet-and-greet event that Starke's Beef O'Brady's hosted for former BHS football players Torin Brazell and Chail Cummings, who play in college at East Carolina and Purdue, respectively.

Perhaps some of those students he talks to will go on to find great success in life. Who knows? Maybe Dream Pilot Media will help them tell their story.

That's what Dream Pilot Media is all about — telling a story.

"I would say that's the biggest thing we do," Nichols said. "We don't just point and film a game and say, 'These are the highlights.' We want it to be entertaining, especially in this day and age of social media, where people's attention spans are kind of short."

"We try to do something that's going to kind of grab you."

JOBS

"We can always use donations because they are somehow going to benefit a student," DeValerio said.

Some students benefit by receiving money for college. Community for Schools established the Cheryl G. Canova Scholarship, which was presented for the first time this year to graduating seniors Jaden Hankerson and Saniyah Thompson. Each received $2,000.

DeValerio said the goal is to increase the scholarship amount each year.

Students also have the chance to earn scholarships through Community for Schools' Take Stock in Children program. The program pairs students with adult mentors, with that mentor relationship idealistically lasting from sixth grade through graduation. Students who successfully go through the program, maintaining a specified minimum grade-point average, avoiding major disciplinary issues and keeping absences to a minimum, receive two-year scholarships.

Another program within the Take Stock program has chosen ninth-graders receiving four-year scholarships upon graduating. Those students also receive yearly stipends for college incidentals.

DeValerio and Take Stock in Children College Success Coach Candace Osteen, in a joint statement, shared their thoughts on the Take Stock program: "Take Stock in Children scholarships open doors for students in rural communities by removing financial and social barriers that often limit their access to higher education. These scholarships provide more than just college tuition, and they come with mentorship, academic support and a clear pathway to success.

"For students in rural areas, where resources can be limited, and college may seem out of reach, Take Stock offers hope, guidance and the tangible means to pursue a college degree. This not only increases their chances of achieving well-paying careers, but also empowers them to break generational barriers, become leaders in their communities and inspire others to aim higher."

Cummings, who was part of Take Stock in Children, said, "The program gave me access to mentors, support and resources that helped me stay focused on my goals and inspired me to keep pushing forward, no matter what challenges I faced." She also added, "Looking ahead, I know the lessons and support I've received through Take Stock will help me and others prepare for college and beyond. It has given me a clearer vision of my future, helped me build better habits and boosted my confidence. Most importantly, it showed me that with the right mindset and support, I can achieve anything I set my mind to."

If you'd like to support Bradford Community for Schools with a monetary donation, serve as a student mentor or find out other ways in which you can help, please call 904-966-6004.

Jimmy Gilland

With heavy hearts, the family of Jimmy Clifford Gilland, 90, of Graham announces his passing. He went to meet his Savior face to face on Saturday, July 26, 2024, at E.T. York Hospice Haven in Gainesville. He was born Dec. 11, 1934, to Henry "Pee Wee" and Minnie Arthur Gilland. He was born in Alabama and moved with his family to Gainesville as a small child. He was a hard worker as a tree surgeon for the City of Gainesville from 1952 until July of 1982, when he retired. He planted and maintained many of the trees around downtown Gainesville. Not one to be idle, he then went to work for the Alachua County Sheriff's office from Dec. 1982, as an animal control officer until he retired again in 1997. He was skilled at working with his hands. There weren't too many things Jimmy couldn't fix or build. He cut and milled trees to make furniture for many years. He also tanned hides and did bead work in the Native American tradition. He was very proud of his Native American heritage. He enjoyed hunting, making knives, turning wood on his lathe, making and giving away ink pens and growing things. After his retirements, he learned wood carving and flint napping. He and Pat loved traveling and fulfilled their "bucket list," traveling in the Western United States. He was a gifted storyteller who never met a stranger. He was preceded in death by his parents; and daughter, Penny Gilland Kientz.

Vernon Hendricks

With heavy but thankful hearts, the family of Vernon McQueen Hendricks announces his passing on Monday, July 21, 2025, at the age of 89. He was born Dec. 6, 1935, in Lake Butler, to Butler and Ollie Hendricks. His twin, Herman, and Vernon were the 10th and 11th of 12 children, and grew up on the family farm. A farm that remains in the family to this day. His parents left a legacy of love and family that is rare, and he and his siblings have carried that legacy forward. It gave him great happiness to know that, just as his children had grown up with cousins as best friends, his grandchildren were doing the same. He graduated from the University of Florida with Bachelor's and Master's of Science in Biology.

Following the completion of his master's degree, he traveled to Europe and began his teaching career at a US military base in Verdun, France. He spent two years in Europe, taking the opportunity to travel as much as possible and visiting every country on the continent. Upon his return to the United States, he continued his teaching career at high schools in Lake City and Rockledge. He later became a Professor of Botany and Biology at Brevard Community College (now known as Eastern Florida State College) in Cocoa. After more than 25 years there, he and Janet retired to Gainesville in 1995. While teaching in Rockledge, he received a National Science Foundation grant to participate in a summer science program at Rutgers University, where he met his wife, Janet Proulx. They married June 26, 1965, in Connecticut at the home of Janet's aunt and uncle. Over the years, they welcomed the arrival of David, Donna, and Tom. In June of this year, they celebrated 60 devoted years together. Although, as their household expanded, Janet devoted herself to raising their children, Vernon viewed her as an equal partner, treating her with appreciation and respect. Their home was one known for its hospitality and warmth, filled with laughter and fellowship. Vernon, having been one of the first in his family to graduate from college, believed strongly in the value of education, and was proud to support each of the children in obtaining their degrees. However, he was proudest that David, Donna, and Tom were happily married, with loving homes of their own, and what he considered to be their greatest accomplishment, his grandchildren, Eli, Kaylie, Grace, Eden, and Emmeline (better known as Emma), were the great joy of his life. It was hard to convince them that he was a strict father because at Granddaddy's house, you didn't have to finish a meal to have ice cream, you could make as big a mess as you wanted, and it was always playtime! His life was defined by his faith, and he devoted many years of service to the church, serving as a deacon at Central Church of Christ in Cocoa, as a deacon and an elder at the Rockledge Church of Christ in Rockledge, and as an elder at the University City Church of Christ in Gainesville. He instilled that faith in his children by living a life that exemplified humility and integrity. The saying that "you can't go home again" has not been true for his children. They have turned to him throughout their adult lives to help them make important decisions, guide them through the challenges of jobs and relationships, and as a source of constant strength and encouragement. Though his frugality was the stuff of family legend, he gave generously of his time and financial resources to those in need, no matter who they were. They have lost count of how many people have reached out over the years to tell them about the impact their dad had on their lives, whether as a teacher, a friend, a mentor, or just a kind man who bought them a meal, paid their bills, or held their hand and prayed with them in a time of need.

In a world where many are relentlessly focused on the pursuit of money and status, Vernon was a humble and unassuming man, committed to loving and serving others. For him wealth was found in servanthood to Christ, the love of family, fellowship with friends, and spending time in nature, especially growing and nurturing a garden. By these measures, he left this world the richest man on earth. For his family, his absence leaves a hole in their hearts that will not be filled until they are reunited with him in Heaven. He was preceded in death by his parents; sisters, Marie (Elijah) Brooks, John (Eloise) and Strick), Evelyn (Edison) Paulk, James (Adolyen), Drew (Josie), Bryan (Jeannette), Joe (Elaine), Harold (Martha), David (Ann), and Herman (Pam).

He is survived by his wife of 60 years, Janet; children, David (Megan) Hendricks, Donna (Greg) Edwards, and Thomas (Jennifer) Hendricks; adored grandchildren, Eli, Kaylie, Grace, Eden, and Emmeline; youngest brother, Donald (Lois); treasured nieces and nephews, all of which he called his "favorites;" and many great- and great-great-nieces and nephews.

A Celebration of Life will be held Saturday, Aug. 2, at University City Church of Christ. Visitation with the family will begin at 10 a.m. and the service will follow at 11 a.m. The family appreciates more than words can convey the support of their many friends and family during this sad time. In lieu of flowers, please consider a donation to one of the following: Christian Family Services, the adoption agency that helped make Emmeline Faith (Emma) a beloved member of the Hendricks family and Vernon's granddaughter: Christian Family Services, Inc., 2720 SW Second Ave., Gainesville, 32607

Deborah Rogers

With extremely heavy hearts, the family of Deborah "Debbie" Box Rogers announces her entrance to her Heavenly mansion on Saturday, July 26, 2025. She was born Feb. 19, 1956 in Lake City to Emogene and J.E. Box of Lake Butler. She was the oldest of four children and was not afraid to let them know that she was their "big sis." To say Debbie had a wonderful life would be an understatement. Throughout the tenure of her treasured time on Earth, she loved many things, but aside from Jesus, her grandchildren took the lead! She enjoyed the simple things in life, including sitting on her front porch with a cup of coffee and looking out at all of God's creations. She devoted 40 years to Pritchett Trucking, where she worked as an administrative assistant to Marvin and Phillip Pritchett (who both held a unique spot in her heart that couldn't be filled by anyone else). She was a proud member of First Baptist Church of Raiford and took pride in leading the congregation in songs every Sunday. To her, singing for the Lord was the best way to worship him. Her sweet voice and contagious, uplifting spirit will be deeply missed. She was preceded in death by her loving husband of 33 years, David Rogers; and wonderful father, J.E. Box.

She is survived by her mother, Emogene Box of Lake Butler; brothers, Wayne (Janice) Box of Jacksonville and Greg (CecCee) Box and Kevin (Kim) Box, all of Lake Butler; children, Chad Rogers and Justin Rogers; grandchildren, Eli Rogers, Morgan Rogers, Grayson Sykes, Harper Rogers, Easton Rogers, and Brantley Etheridge; and a host of nieces and nephews. To be such a little lady, Debbie had a heart bigger than words could describe and to say she will be greatly missed would be an understatement.

Services were Tuesday, July 29, at Archer-Milton Funeral Home and Wednesday, July 30, at First Baptist Church of Raiford. Debbie will be laid to rest beside David at Sapp Cemetery immediately following the service.

Archer-Milton Funeral Home is honored to serve Debbie's family during this difficult time. www.archerfuneralhome.com 386-496-2008.

Union's 2024 football season by the numbers

BY CLIFF SMELLEY
cliff@bctelegraph.com

Union County High School came close to a perfect regular season in 2024 (with a one-point loss to Chiefland the only blemish) and then won two playoff games before its season came to an end with a loss to Madison County in the Rural Class state semifinals.

Madison would go on to win the state championship.

It was the second time in three years that the Tigers played a state-semifinal game and the sixth straight year they advanced to at least the region-final round.

Only one of Union's 10 wins saw the Tigers score less than 22 points. The Tigers had five games in which they scored at least 42 points.

Defensively, the Tigers held 10 opponents to less than 20 points and recorded three shutouts.

With the 2025 season approaching, the Telegraph-Times-Monitor takes a look at last year's results and some of the numbers associated with the season.

Keystone 2024 football season by the numbers

Zane Leger was Keystone's leading rusher last year as a junior.

BY CLIFF SMELLEY
cliff@bctelegraph.com

Keystone Heights High School got the 2024 varsity football season off to a strong start with a shutout win over Interlachen. Despite two big shutout losses in a row after that, the Indians were a .500 team after the first four games.

Unfortunately, not much went right the rest of the season, as the Indians sustained a number of injuries and lost six in a row to finish with a 2-8 record.

With the 2025 season approaching, the Telegraph-Times-Monitor takes a look at last year's results and some of the numbers associated with the season.

2024 results (with * denoting District 5-2A games)

- 29-0 win over Interlachen
- 35-0 loss to Union County

customized estimate based on body size can be reached by dividing one's body weight in pounds by 15. Children, who become dehydrated more easily than adults, need more water per pound. A 10-pound child, for example, needs between 2 cups and 3 cups of fluids a day, and a 90-pound child needs between 8 cups and 9 cups.

Although these guidelines exceed the well-known, "eight-cups-a-day" maxim, Acosta said it's important to remember they include water consumed through both drinking and eating. Many fruits and vegetables, including oranges, watermelon, cucumbers, lettuce and tomatoes, naturally contain significant amounts of water. Broths and soups — particularly clear ones — are also water-rich foods.

"So, you're not necessarily chugging 11 to 15 cups of water a day," she said.

Hydrating through beverages doesn't have to be boring, either. While drinks containing caffeine, alcohol and added sugar can have dehydrating effects and should generally be avoided, sparkling water is just as hydrating as still water. Infusing water with fruit and herbs or using sugar-free flavoring drops can also make it more appealing.

Acosta suggests increasing motivation by using a bottle labeled with time markers that indicate consumption goals. Setting reminders or associating daily activities with drinking can also be helpful.

"Consider something you do on a regular basis, like brushing your teeth or eating a meal. Perhaps that's the time to take a sip," she said.

She cautions, however, that water is not always the most effective hydration choice.

Someone engaged in vigorous activity loses electrolytes — essential minerals like sodium and potassium — through sweating, and water alone cannot restore them, Acosta said. Instead, grab a sports drink or combine water with a salty snack, like pretzels or nuts.

"You don't necessarily need a commercial sports beverage," she said. "While these can be helpful for athletes needing just the right balance of water, electrolytes and carbohydrates to fuel performance, most people can rehydrate quite effectively with just water and a salty snack if they've lost some water from sweating."

One of the simplest methods to gauge whether any hydration-boosting technique is working is tied to the bathroom.

An adequately hydrated person will feel the urge to urinate every three to four hours, and their urine should be a light-yellow color, Acosta said.

"And be sure to pay attention to how thirsty you are," she said. "If you start to feel thirsty, there's a good chance you're already somewhat dehydrated."
