New fair board begins its work

BY MARK J. CRAWFORD
mark@bctelegraph.com

The new board of the Bradford County Fair Association has one meeting under its belt, an executive board and its first event on the calendar. Paul Huntley, president of the Bradford-Union Swine Association and previously appointed by the county commission as president of the fair board, chaired the May 24 meeting and oversaw the election of the remaining executive board members.

The vice presidency went to Brad Thomas, also vice president of the swine association. Chris Page, a returning member of the previous fair board with volunteer and banking experience, was appointed treasurer. Heather Hinds from Bradford County Public Works was elected secretary.

More than just producing a weeklong fair, Huntley told the board they need to think about the events that would be scheduled throughout the year, and he opened the floor to hear from board members their thoughts about moving forward.

Marty Shaw of Coldwell Banker Smith and Smith Realty and a former member of the Jacksonville Fair Association expressed a desire to see Bradford’s fair return to its former excellence.

Having been involved with the fair now for many years, Vice President Thomas said he’s slowly watched things slip away under recent management. He believes this larger group will incorporate more of the community’s voice and lead to more involvement.

Kaitlin VanHeusen, agriculture teacher at North Florida Technical College, has of course been involved at the fairgrounds, both as mother and organizing poultry showmanship. She advocated bringing back school booths and other youth projects, so parents have reason to show up and spend money.

“That plant, that chicken, that rabbit, that fair project, that art project they did in their school class needs to be back in that building. That’s how you drive traffic in. That’s how you reach out. That’s how you buy in support,” she said.

Roxanne Rosier has been involved for 37 years and said she witnessed the loss of the community’s energy and

Recreation hopes face funding hurdle

BY MARK J. CRAWFORD
mark@bctelegraph.com

County Commission Chairman Danny Riddick’s proposal for a recreation program that would bring youth sports back to Bradford received praise but failed to achieve immediate buy-in because of the cost.

The plan calls for the county commission and Tourist Development Council to match the $150,000 the city of Starke currently spends on the upkeep of its recreational facilities on Edwards Road and Thomas Street. TDC’s contribution would be spent on facilities, while the city and county would fund operations, including hiring a recreation director and assistant.

Riddick has been meeting with several current and past leaders involved with recreation, some appearing for the presentation. They included Sheriff Gordon Smith, who called youth activities Crime Prevention 101. Riddick echoed that, saying sports are good for the confidence and character of kids and the adults who volunteer their time to coach and mentor them. Just like jobs and a thriving economy, a great parks and recreation program improves the quality of life for residents, he said.

Riddick demonstrated the enthusiasm for recreation listing some of the ongoing activities. Bradford Youth Athletics Inc. provides fall and spring baseball for approximately 200 boys and girls. Braxton Britt has brought Southeastern Fastpitch softball tournaments to Edwards Road, filling hotels and restaurants. Bradford Schools Athletic Director Sampson Jackson, with the help of other coaches and community leaders like Alica McMillian, led a basketball program at BHS for first-through sixth-graders which drew 95 participants in its first year. They didn’t have all the answers. Jackson said, they just knew they had to get started.

One of the players, a 7-year-old named Weston, told commissioners he had an amazing experience playing basketball.

“I learned so much, and I got better at playing basketball because of Coach Sampson and the other coaches,” he said. “It was fun to see my friends and play together.”

Weston said he doesn’t always get to see and play with his friends when he goes to Keystone Heights to play soccer and flag football.

“It’s a lot of fun, but it would be more fun if I had my friends from school to play with,” he said.

Jackson picked up on that plea. “Our hope is just that we can provide the resources that we need and provide the opportunities that we need, so that our kids that are growing up together can literally grow up together,” he said.

Riddick provided an overview of programs that are drawing kids from Bradford as well as the city of Starke facilities that could be hosting those sports. There have been recent improvements, including a new football field. Some modifications, such as fencing and additional restrooms, are still needed.

“The city of Starke has awesome facilities. We just got to put it to work,” he said, also speaking of the possibilities the county-owned fairgrounds offers for flag football or soccer.

State trail expanding through Bradford

BY MARK J. CRAWFORD
mark@bctelegraph.com

Bids will be opened this month to continue construction of the Palatka-to-Lake Butler State Trail through Bradford County, including the portion crossing U.S. 301.

Barney Bennett from the Florida Department of Transportation previewed the work for county commissioners June 3.

Three separate sections have been funded for construction, with bids opening on June 11. The first is 2.3 miles from C.R. 327 in Union County to C.R. 235 in Bradford. The railroad trestle over New River will be removed and replaced with a 600-foot pedestrian bridge, Bennett said. The second segment is 4.1 miles from C.R. 235 to C.R. 225 (Southwest 102nd Avenue in Sampson City).

These first two segments, which were bid as a single project, have an expected completion date of June 2027.

The third segment picks up at C.R. 227 and extends to C.R. 18 (Navarre Avenue) in Hampton. This 2.9-mile portion includes a 225-foot pedestrian bridge over U.S. 301, passing 24 feet above the traffic. The expected completion date is November 2026.

Construction is expected to begin in September, with construction on U.S. 301 primarily taking place at night to limit traffic disruption. Florida Power and Light and Comcast are relocating their lines now to make way for the project.

These projects will help fill the gap from Lake Butler to Hampton. Existing segments include the stretch from Lake Bulter to C.R. 237 and from Hampton to Keystone Heights and beyond. There is an additional unfunded segment from C.R. 225 in Sampson City to C.R. 227. This requires some additional permitting through the Florida Department of Environmental Protection because of the 120-foot pedestrian bridge proposed over Sampson River. It also requires a permanent easement over a CSX railroad crossing.

The trail does not cross the railroad in Hampton, Bennet said. The trail will end on the east side of the crossing and pick up on the west side, requiring users to cross using C.R. 18 until FDOT can place a sidewalk there. That, too, will require a permanent easement, and time prevented including it in this project, Bennett said.

The full length of the trail from Lake Butler to Palatka is nearly 47 miles. The two main trailheads are in Lake Butler and at Twin Lakes, but Bradford County issued a recent request for proposed trailhead improvements to Bobby Sheppard Park in Hampton. It is an FDOT SCOP grant funded project.

The trail is open to walkers, runners, cyclists, inline skaters and pets. Sometimes still referred to as Rails to Trails, Florida Department of Transportation’s Division of State Lands acquired the former railroad corridor in 2001. These segments are part of the Florida National Scenic Trail stretching from Big Cypress National Preserve in the Everglades to the Gulf Islands National Seashore in the western Panhandle.

A designated part of the Florida Greenways and Trails system, the design and construction is funded through FDOT’s SUN Trail program.

Bradford Fire Rescue unveils new engines

BY JENN SAMSEL
Special to the Telegraph

Bradford County Fire Rescue revealed its two newest engines during a June 2 ceremony at its Speedville Station on Southeast County Road 21B.

County officials, along with State Rep. Chuck Brannan, participated in the event.

The ceremony celebrated a long-standing fire service tradition that dates to the era of horse-drawn fire wagons.

Bradford County Fire Rescue Chief Ben Carter opened the ceremony by welcoming everyone and expressing gratitude to the county commissioners and state representatives who contributed to implementing and funding the new fire engines.

Neighboring fire stations were also present, including Fire Chief Kevin Mobley of the Melrose Fire Department and chiefs Darren and Matt Ferguson from Dixie County Fire Rescue, who attended to support the push-in engine ceremony.

“I want to begin by offering our sincere thanks to Rep. Chuck Brannon, Sen. Jennifer Bradley, and Lauren Tingle from the State Fire Marshal’s office, who played an instrumental role in managing these appropriations and guiding the process every step of the way,” Carter said. “These three individuals have been relentless advocates for public safety, and they fought hard in Tallahassee to ensure Bradford County received the funding necessary for these apparatuses. Their work securing state appropriations made this possible, and we’re truly grateful.”

“These engines are an investment in the future of our department, the safety of our first responders, and the well-being of the people we serve,”

he continued, “and they’re among some of the first fire engines in the state of Florida to be equipped with blue emergency lights in the rear.”

Brannan said the State Fire Marshal’s Office was key in securing the funding.

“My prayer and hope is that they’ll pump a lot of water over the years, put out a lot of fires, save structures, and save lives,” he said.

Board of County Commissioners Chair Danny Riddick said the new engines would provide first responders with the tools they need to continue doing a great job.

Mobley, who is also a captain with BCFR, gave a brief history of the push-in and washdown ceremony tradition, which dates back to the 17th century.

Riddick asserted that a well-run program — which would also include input from a recreation board made up of city and county leaders — would be self-sustaining through fees, concessions sales, sponsorships and grants, but he called for a two-year commitment of funding from the city and county to get them there.

“We’ve come together on some other projects, and they’re working very well. And we need to do something for this, for our children,” he said.

Starke’s full commission has not heard the presentation, but the $150,000 commitment won’t cost them more than they currently spend if they agree to join with county. Where the county would get its $150,000 was an issue.

Commissioner Diane Andrews felt the partnership could be another one of the positive changes she sees making a difference in Bradford County.

“It is going to cost us, but sometimes it’s hard to put a number on something this important,” she said.

Commissioner Carolyn Spooner said the county’s children are worth the money, but she was cautious about committing to that amount until the commission was further along planning its budget for next year.

Clerk Denny Thompson reminded the board that it just spent $1.7 million purchasing the fairgrounds “for our kids,” and Commissioner Chris Dougherty took the counterargument from there.

“Get your umbrellas out, because I’m all rain on the parade right now,” he said.

While saying he fully supported youth recreation, Dougherty said the county tends to “spend to save instead of save to spend.” They are looking at funding the fire department with a fire assessment fee — but only 50% of that budget — and they haven’t been able to roll back the property tax rate. The county just sent $3.5 million of the money promised to Starke for its utility extension. Combined with the money spent on the fairgrounds, that’s more than $5 million that is no longer in the bank earning interest revenue for the county, he said.

Thompson added to that any additional spending that will be needed for the fairgrounds (including the cost of hiring a fair manager) and the increase in the fire department budget to fund new employees for the Brooker Fire Station next year.

“We don’t even have a fire assessment yet,” he said. “I just want you all to remember the financial situation that we’re in right now. It’s devastating,” he said.

Spooner said if money for recreation is not in the budget, they need to plan for it.

“If we’re still in the throes of trying to figure our budget out now and how we’re going to maintain ourselves without an undue hardship on the community, we need to walk it through a little more in terms of the details. But I think it’s an excellent idea, and I think we should pursue it, but not make that decision until we have all those details worked out,” she said.

Dougherty thanked Riddick and the others for the presentation, but — short of finding spending to cut from the budget — he said now was not the right time.

Riddick said he intends to move forward with his presentation to the city of Starke in two weeks and bring that board’s decision back to the next county commission meeting.

“I’ll just be honest with you, if we can’t come up with $150,000 a year for recreation for our kids, the county’s already broke,” he said, fearing the idea would be tabled for years.

Dougherty and Spooner tried to reassure him that the support for recreation was there if they can find the funding.

involvement. Without the adults, they won’t have the children, so she said they must stress the importance of carrying on this tradition.

Amanda Hardee, the owner of Cutt’n Up salon, and a mother whose children raised animals for the fair, said she wanted to see the horse arena restored and become a new rental space for the association. Lisa Holtzendorf agreed with Hardee about the potential as a revenue source, saying it’s a shame families must go out of county to ride. Having been involved with the fair since she first showed a pig at the age of 8, she said the fairgrounds should be rented out every week.

“Every weekend there needs to be something going on down there. There’s no reason for that place to sit empty (with) as many things that are happening outside of our community that you could bring right here,” she said. Familiar with fairs in and out of state, she said Bradford County’s fair could be as big or even bigger than some others.

While everyone wanted to see a return to form, some saw an opportunity add to the fair experience, including Valara Petteway of Dreamers and Doers of Bradford County. She said her main goal was to bring more cultural activities to the fair.

Vyunda Strong said she wanted to see the community to come together around the fairgrounds and for there to be something for everyone at the underutilized facility. Introducing herself as a community advocate, she also called for accountability in its management, and she wasn’t the only one.

Board member Greg Alavarez questioned the selection of board members, saying the county commission had stacked the board by handpicking members instead of relying on applicants and violated the charter by appointing a president. He said such actions are why the fair association has lost support, and Strong agreed, also questioning potential Sunshine Law violations if board members had been with each other outside of public meetings.

County Manager Scott Kornegay explained the county’s agreement with the former fair board stipulated the commission would select someone to chair the board. Board member Jeff Johnson said people can throw darts, but the board must get started somewhere. Thomas said the executive board’s first item of business would be to draft changes to the old charter, and new board members would vote on those proposed amendments. He suggested the executive board have a three-month term, and the board agreed they would reevaluate leadership at that time.

Even with challenges like amending the 1967 charter and finding grant funds to restore the horse arena, Huntley expressed excitement about the potential for the fairgrounds.

“I think if we all come together, work together, I think the fair can be great again,” he said. “And when I say the fair, the whole fairgrounds down there can be something this whole county’s proud of.”

The first event under the new board actually belongs to fair board member Michael Heeder, a retired firefighter responsible for events like Touch a Truck and the Starke Spangled Splash Bash, returning this July. Because the event has outgrown its former venue at Bradford High, it is moving to the fairgrounds this year and will include two days of entertainment on July 4 and 5. A parade at 9 a.m. downtown will kick off the event, with festivities at the fairgrounds continuing that afternoon.

Future fair board meetings will continue the fourth Tuesday of every month at 6 p.m., with an executive board meeting at 5:30 p.m. These will typically take place in the commission meeting room at the courthouse, although the June meeting will begin with a tour of the fairgrounds.

Once the truck were inside, they were officially in service.

Before the washdown and push-in ceremony, the Rev. Harry Hatcher blessed the servicemen, women and engines.

Afterward, children and county commissioners took small buckets of water and splashed water onto the fire engines as a symbolic gesture of washing them. Next, crew members carefully backed the engines into bays while the rest walked in uniform in front of the vehicle, symbolically guiding it.

Lastly, a call was made to dispatch to inform them that both engines were officially in service.

Bradford Fire Rescue Division Chief Dylan Rogers said the tradition honors not only new pieces of apparatus but also the dedication, progress, and unity that define his department and community.

Both trucks were included in the budgets for 2023 and 2024, one costing $450,000 and the other $475,000.

According to Brannan, “Close to about $2 million is going into Bradford County Fire Rescue for a new Fire Station in Brooker and new fire trucks.”

Lawtey negotiates agreement over fire assessment

BY MELISSA PYLE
Special to the Telegraph

There was much anticipation surrounding Lawtey’s June council meeting due to recent news the county could consider removing the personnel and trucks from the Lawtey Fire Department if the council couldn’t come to an agreement with the county on its special assessment.

County Commissioner Carolyn Spooner addressed the council and the public to assure them that the county wants everyone to work together for the betterment of Bradford. She was open to any questions about the proposed fire assessment and offered her input throughout the meeting.

Councilman Joshua Bell took the floor to address Bradford Fire Rescue Chief Ben Carter over the fire assessment. Bell asked how it is not double taxing the city’s residents to add a fee if they’re already paying taxes to the city. Carter responded by saying it’s a valid argument when people outside the city limits will only be paying one assessment to the county. Bell was not the only council member to have questions for Carter and Spooner over the fire assessment fees.

Members were frustrated over what they felt was a poor portrayal of the city in a recent commission meeting and a sense they were being given an unfair ultimatum. Councilwoman Amy Blom took issue with the statement that “Lawtey was just a building”. Blom addressed Carter and said “We don’t have just a building” as she proceeded to share the financial costs the city of Lawtey has spent for the department.

Since February 2020, the city has paid out over $101,000 for the fire department. Blom said things such as new appliances and flooring were also paid for by the city and weren’t included in the $101,000 figure. The city still has the fire department in its budget and pays for all utilities associated with the station and some repairs. Lawtey also gifted a truck to the county, but the vehicle requires $50k in repairs.

Blom said it is not fair for residents within the city limits to have to pay three taxes. Explaining part of the residents’ county tax bill goes to the fire department, part of the city taxes go to the fire department, and now a fire assessment would be a third way residents would be taxed.

Chief Carter responded to Blom by clarifying that his statement about Lawtey being “just a building” wasn’t meant to demean the city’s contributions to the fire department. He said it was in response to the question, “What equipment does Lawtey have?” and explained that the city doesn’t own the equipment, just the building

“It was not my intent to say that Lawtey does not contribute to the fire department. You certainly do. It’s been a great partnership,” he said.

Carter went on to remind the council that prior to the county taking over the station, they were still paying bills associated with the station when it was an all-volunteer station, but he says he does see the points about double taxation on city residents.

Assessing financial and safety costs

Blom expressed her frustration with the delay memorandum of understanding between the city and county and the assessment, but said it was due to the council awaiting more information from the county on the final numbers. Blom asked if there was time to review a new MOU in which the city no longer pays for the utilities and repairs associated with the station.

City attorney Dan Sikes requested time from the mayor to question the chief about the repercussions of the city not signing the fire assessment agreement. Sikes asked, “What’s the penalty if we don’t sign it?”

Carter said that the commission could move the resources to Heilbronn Springs. Sikes said, “That would effectively remove any fire protection from the north end of the county ... because we [the city] defied the county?” Sikes also asked if the citizens of Heilbronn Springs would be paying more than the city of Lawtey in fees.

Carter said no, the argument is for the city of Lawtey to opt in to the fees. All county residents will receive the fire assessment bill, but if the city opts out, the residents within city limits will not be paying those fees. Sikes said it seems that the county would be “punishing the city,” and by default punishing the residents in north Bradford who would not have fire or emergency services within a safe distance.

Spooner interjected and said the county does not want Lawtey to lose fire services and their intent is to work together to resolve the problem. She suggested the council members have an emergency meeting with the chief to address the MOU and make adjustments.

Council member Virginia Warner stressed the dire consequences of not having a fire department, one of which is obtaining and retaining homeowners’ insurance. Councilwoman Debra Norman expressed deep concerns over the human toll. She said the sheer volume of traffic on U.S. 301 calls for an emergency response team to be in proximity in case of wrecks. Another example of the human cost was the proximity of the station to the school and the prison, both needing fire and emergency services.

Norman shared that many citizens have told her they can’t afford another expense in their budget. Spooner responded by explaining there will be ways to assist citizens and if someone is below the poverty line, they will not have to pay.

Ultimately, the council voted to hold an emergency meeting on June 16 to rework the existing MOU to state the city will no longer pay the station’s utilities or repairs in exchange for the city opting into the county’s proposed assessment fee of $167 per year, per household. (This amount has yet to be finalized.) This will remove the double dipping council members felt the city’s residents would be facing if adjustments are not made and will ensure the station in Lawtey stays open.

The timing of the last-minute agreement was even more celebratory when Chief Carter presented the city with one of the new engines acquired by the county through state appropriations. Carter said the new engines come at no cost to the county and one will be going to the Lawtey station.

Clay County breaks ground on new animal shelter

Clay County officials joined representatives from Chewy Health and Lincoln Memorial University on May 27 for a groundbreaking ceremony at the site of the county’s new Animal Services building in Middleburg. During the ceremony, Chewy Health pledged a $1 million donation—made in partnership with LMU—to support the construction of an innovative educational space within the new facility.

This specialized room, named the Chewy Health & Lincoln Memorial University Applied Learning Center, will serve as a mixed-use space for LMU veterinary students. Designed to deliver hands-on learning in a real-world shelter environment, the center will play a vital role in training the next generation of veterinarians in shelter medicine, handling techniques and clinical skills. The space will also be available for future community events and educational programming.

“The Chewy Health & LMU Applied Learning Center is a powerful example of what’s possible when education, innovation and community come together,” said Mita Malhotra, President of Chewy Health. “At Chewy Health, we are deeply committed to supporting the broader profession by expanding access to real-world, experiential learning. This pledge reflects our belief that investing in future veterinary leaders strengthens not just the profession, but also the wellbeing of the pets and communities they serve.”

The partnership between the Clay County Board of County Commissioners, Chewy Health, and the LMU College of Veterinary Medicine at Orange Park brings meaningful benefits to the region across multiple fronts. In addition to enhancing student training opportunities, the new facility will significantly expand the capacity of Clay County Animal Services, enabling staff to perform more advanced medical procedures and improving health outcomes for shelter pets.

“We’re proud to partner with Chewy Health and Clay County on a project that brings lasting benefits to both veterinary education and animal care in our community,” said Kim Carney, Dean of Lincoln Memorial University–College of Veterinary Medicine at Orange Park. “The Chewy Health and LMU Applied Learning Center will give our students valuable hands-on experience early in their training, while also supporting the vital work happening every day at Clay County Animal Services. At LMU, we’re committed to building strong community partnerships that create real opportunities for service, learning, and shared impact.”

Clay sheriff’s office teaches active shooter defense

BY JENN SAMSEL
Special to the Monitor

Clay County Sheriff Michelle Cook’s community outreach program, Sheriff’s Net, held a special presentation on Thursday, April 24, at the First Baptist Church in Keystone Heights.

The Civilian Response Active Shooter Events (C.R.A.S.E.) presentation underscored the importance of community preparedness.

The presentation was given by Deputy Matt Edmonson. He showed a video of several scenarios and went in-depth on how to prepare.

Each year, according to the sheriff’s office, there are about 567 gun violence events in the US. Throughout the decades, gun violence in which the shooter has no connection with the victims has increased by 64%.

Fifty percent of attacks happen in businesses, 20% occur outdoors, and 15% in schools and at other events.

Risk factors for active shooters are a history of violence, exposure to violence, substance abuse/dependence, mental illness, and a history of suicidal thoughts.

Practical knowledge is key in an active shooter situation. Knowing where all the exits are is crucial. The 1 Avoid = Run, 2

Deputy Matt Edmonson

Deny = Hide, 3 Defend = Fight strategy provides a practical approach to survival. Remember, it’s always best to run.

Things to remember: be aware of your surroundings, do not hesitate, such as freezing, and go to the closest, safe exit.

The sheriff’s office held a large-scale active assailant training exercise earlier Thursday morning at the Thrasher-Horne Center in Orange Park. This exercise simulated a real-life active shooter situation, allowing law enforcement and emergency response teams to practice responding and coordinating in such a crisis.

According to the sheriff’s office, “The simulated active shooter response is part of our ongoing commitment to preparedness and public safety.”

In the event of such a situation, Stop the Bleed is a great program that teaches civilians how to stop victims from bleeding. Clay County Fire Rescue, in collaboration with other local agencies, offers classes on it.

UNION COUNTY

Lake Butler finds evidence of water theft

BY DAN HILDEBRAN
dan@bctelegraph.com

Lake Butler’s acting public works director told city commissioners that some of the municipality’s water meters appear to have had wires cut or pulled from meters, allowing the customers to be charged the city’s minimum fee rather than for the amount of water those customers actually used.

Jason Furman made the remarks when trying to persuade commissioners to charge customers to repair damaged meters, such as when a homeowner damages a meter by running over it with a lawnmower.

He said Lake Butler’s water meter supplier told him other utilities charge customers $250 when replacing a meter’s interface unit.

However, when Furman mentioned that he had found at least one meter, the wires of which appeared to have been intentionally cut, and three more in which wires were pulled from the interface unit, Mayor Melissa Hendrix, City Attorney John E. Maines, IV, and City Manager Kim Hayes focused on the intentional acts.

“That’s sabotage,” Maines said after hearing Furman’s explanation. “That’s a violation of state law.”

Furman said that once Lake Butler’s remote water meter reading system is in place, the city will be notified daily if any meters record no water use over the last 24 hours, alerting public works of the possibility of a meter problem.

“Every morning, we get an email that says, ‘Hey, these people’s meter did not project a reading,’” he told commissioners. “There’s either something that they cut out there or something wrong out there in the field.”

Maines and Hayes then discussed how the city would investigate possible water theft and notify the sheriff’s office of cases.

“Any time that you suspect foul play or malicious (action),” Maines told Furman, “you need to take pictures. “(Hayes) is going to report it to the sheriff’s office.”

Furman said that besides charging customers for replacing vandalized meters and accusing customers of criminal theft, the city can cut water services to customers who tamper with meters.

Dukes retires after 51 years in school system

BY AMBER J. CRAFT
Special to the Times

After nearly five decades of service to the Union County School District, Eugene Dukes is stepping away from full-time work in education, but not from the community he has called home his entire life.

From walking the halls as a student to leading the district as superintendent, Dukes has worn nearly every hat in the Union County education system since 1975. Teacher, principal, district administrator, coordinator, and superintendent—Dukes has done it all, and then some.

“I’ve done everything there is to do. Basically. I’ve been a teacher, been a principal. I’ve worked at the district office, I’ve been superintendent of schools, and then the last few years I’ve worked in adult ed,” Dukes said in a recent interview. “I’m the director of testing, and we all wear a bunch of hats.”

His retirement marks the end of an era for Union County’s tight-knit education community, but not the end of Dukes’ impact.

Eugene Dukes

transformative years in education—decades of shifting policies, growing student populations, and ever-evolving academic standards. Through it all, he remained a constant source of leadership and stability.

In recent years, he has shifted his focus toward adult education and testing. His current role as coordinator reflects his continued commitment to helping people access education and opportunity at every stage of life.

However, even as he transitions out of the school district, Dukes is far from finished with public service.

“It’s surreal. I mean, at this point I haven’t really got used to it yet, but it’s my love,” Dukes said of retiring. “So, we’re going to continue. Like I said, I’m not going anywhere. I’m going to be around.”

Eyes on the Future: Workforce Development and Beyond

Dukes now serves on an executive board focused on regional workforce development—an area he believes is critical to the future of Union County and surrounding areas. The board is working to restructure workforce development regions in Florida, aiming to improve access to job training and placement services.

“We’re trying to make things better and easier to navigate for job seekers,” Dukes explained. “This is about creating real opportunities for people—students and adults alike—to find meaningful work and support their families.”

It’s a natural extension of his life’s work: empowering people through education.

His involvement in adult education and workforce development comes at a pivotal time. As economies evolve and the demand for skilled labor increases, Dukes sees great promise in regional collaboration and innovative workforce strategies.

A Lasting Legacy

Dukes’ departure from day-to-day operations may mark the end of an extraordinary chapter, but the impact of his work will continue to shape the district for years to come.

He has been a mentor to generations of educators, a guide to administrators, and a friendly face for thousands of students. His leadership has left a mark not only on the school district but on the entire Union County community.

Perhaps most inspiring is his continued drive to serve.

“I’m not done,” he said. “I may be retiring from the school system, but I’m still going to be part of this community. There’s still work to be done.”

Complaints about vagrants in vacant building

BY DAN HILDEBRAN
dan@bctelegraph.com

Lake Butler officials talked about the need to enforce building codes for commercial properties and prevent vagrants from occupying vacant buildings.

Bo Bayer brought up the topic during the city commission’s May 20 public comment period. He said that for two days recently, an overpowering odor was coming from a building formerly occupied by Sunrise Laundry.

“I get my gas there,” Bayer said of Sunrise Grocery, which is next to the vacant structure. “I like the people, but that place in the back and the old little pizza place over there needs to have a door put on it. And around back needs to be cleaned up.”

Bayer added that during inclement weather, vagrants seek shelter in the building without a door.

Commissioner Joe Stephenson, who attended the meeting by telephone, said he had already talked to the property owner about the problem.

“I’ve talked to the owner of the Sunrise and told him that he needed to make an effort to get rid of all those people,” Stephenson said. “I’ve talked to the owner...no less than four times, and he said he’ll take care of it. He would run out there. He would do something, and then the next day they’re back again.”

Bo Bayer said that for two days recently, an overpowering odor was coming from a building formerly occupied by Sunrise Laundry.

The commissioner added that the sheriff’s office told him it cannot arrest people for trespassing without a complaint from the property owner.

City Manager Kim Hayes told commission members she would talk to Sheriff’s Captain Lyn Williams for clarification on enforcing trespassing and the possibility of posting “No Trespassing” signs on the property.

City Attorney John E. Maines IV said the signs would allow law enforcement to bypass warning individuals before arresting them for trespassing.

Commissioners said vagrants moving from building to building within Lake Butler is an ongoing problem, which some frequenting city parks after hours.

Mayor Melissa Hendrix said one individual has, in the past, loitered at Fletcher Myers Park, the park next to City Hall.

A Life Rooted in Union County

Born and raised here, Dukes graduated from the very school where he would later serve as a principal and administrator. His family’s legacy in the area stretches back 12 generations, a fact he shares with pride.

“I went to school here too for 12 years. My family’s been here 12 generations,” Dukes said. “I went first grade through 12th grade here, graduated in this same building right here [Union County High School], and then I went to the University of Florida and then I went to the University of North Florida.”

His blend of humility, humor, and heart has defined his approach to education over the decades. Colleagues describe him as a steadfast leader who always puts the needs of students and staff first.

Union County hires new EMS director

BY DAN HILDEBRAN
dan@bctelegraph.com

Union County’s Board of County Commissioners unanimously voted to hire Brent Allen as their new emergency medical services director, replacing retiring director Toby Witt.

The board followed the recommendation of a committee chaired by Sheriff Brad Whitehead. Witt, former EMS Director Allen Parrish, County Coordinator Jimmy Williams, Board of County Commissioners Chair Channing Dobbs, and county Human Resource/Administrative Assistant Michaela Clemons were also on the committee.

Before commissioners made their selection, Allen told them he had been a paramedic for 14 years, with 10 spent in Union County.

“I believe that I was the first captain ever promoted here, when that position was created by Mitch Andrews,” he told commissioners. “I started here under Chris Drum. I was over training. I’ve got my bachelor’s degree from the University of Florida.”

Brent Allen introduces himself to county commissioners before they select him as Union County’s new EMS director.

Allen operated a ShandsCair helicopter base in the Villages and then managed Columbia County’s emergency medical services, which had been contracted to the private ambulance service Century Ambulance. Later, Century also acquired the contract for Taylor County, so Allen managed the EMS departments for two counties simultaneously.

Century later, promoted Allen to chief of operations over the entire state, where he managed around 350 employees.

Allen told commissioners the experience with the private company was a good opportunity to learn about billing and the importance of efficiency.

However, he said he also saw the downside of privately owned healthcare.

“After Century was acquired,” he said, “I asked if I could step down and just run the EMS services. The inter-facility side and trying to care more about making money than patient care wasn’t really what I’m here for.”

“I’m here for patients,” he added. “That’s the Number 1 priority, to be able to do that. You have to be efficient with money, but trying to make money and affecting patient care by doing that wasn’t something that I was really interested in. So, I asked to step down.”

Allen told commissioners he has trained future paramedics and EMTs at Santa Fe College for the past 10 years. He added that the teaching position will aid him in running the county’s EMS department because he can actively recruit potential employees when working at Santa Fe.

Allen told commissioners he hoped to bring stability to the department.

“I think we’ve had four full-time directors and two interim, and it’s only been about 12 or 13 years,” he said. “I want to bring stability. This is somewhere that I can see myself retiring and being here for the long haul.”

Bradford sheriff’s volunteers open doors, change lives

BY AMBER J. CRAFT
Special to the Telegraph

At the Bradford County Sheriff’s Office jail, transformation is more than a buzzword—it’s a mission. Through the power of community volunteers, the jail’s programs division is building bridges for inmates to reenter society with the tools, confidence, and support they need to make real, lasting changes.

From substance abuse support groups and art classes to religious services and potential entrepreneurship programs, the jail’s volunteer-led initiatives are creating effects far beyond the facility’s walls. These programs are designed not just to fill time, but to fill lives with skills, hope, and purpose.

“Our jail programs give inmates the tools to rebuild their lives—skills for jobs, hope for tomorrow,” said Sheriff Gordon Smith. “We’re not just locking doors—we’re opening pathways. Teaching a trade, building confidence—that’s how we change lives behind bars. When inmates leave with a purpose, they’re not just free, they’re ready to thrive.”

Building Confidence, One Class at a Time

Jenny Johnson, the jail’s programs coordinator, is leading the charge behind the scenes. With 17 years of experience in the Florida Department of Corrections, Johnson knows how important programming can be to someone trying to break the cycle of incarceration.

“We fully realize the impact we—staff and volunteers—can have on individuals while they are here,” Johnson said. “But more importantly, we understand the bigger impact we can have on our community. Incarceration is an opportunity. If we can return a better-prepared, more confident individual back to our community, we, in turn, make our community better.”

The programs currently offered include substance abuse recovery groups, religious and ministry services provided by local churches, and creative outlets like art classes. These classes aren’t just therapeutic—they provide inmates with moments of dignity and purpose in a setting that can often feel hopeless.

And there’s more on the horizon. Johnson is exploring new additions like entrepreneurship courses, employability training, personal finance education, and life skills development. The aim? Equip individuals with the practical tools they need to survive—and thrive—once they return home.

Volunteers Make It Possible

As a small rural agency, the sheriff’s office faces resource challenges, making volunteers essential to its mission.

“We greatly depend on our volunteers to assist us in providing as much programming and support to our inmates as we can,” Johnson said. “We’d love to expand our offerings even further—into interview techniques, trades, and personal development—but we need people from our community to help us make that happen.”

Volunteers come from a variety of backgrounds—teachers, clergy, counselors, artists, and everyday citizens—who are willing to give their time and share their skills. While some programs are faith-based or therapeutic, others are educational or artistic. Regardless of the format, all of them offer inmates a chance to engage in positive, constructive activity.

Volunteers are required to pass a background check, and for safety reasons, those with recent criminal histories or close ties to current inmates may not be approved. But for those who are eligible, the experience can be as rewarding for them as it is for the inmates.

“Impacting that one person in a positive way can have a tremendous ripple effect within our small town,” Johnson said. “And that’s the reward for volunteers—knowing they’ve had a positive impact on someone else’s life and potentially, an impact on their own community.”

A Culture of Support

Johnson credits the success of the volunteer programs to the unwavering support of the Sheriff and command staff.

“The sheriff, Major (Dawn McKinley), and Colonel (Brad Smith) are extremely supportive of our programming,” she said. “Coming from larger institutions where getting buy-in for inmate programs was sometimes an uphill battle, it’s refreshing to be in a place where leadership actively encourages new ideas.”

This supportive environment enables innovation, like the proposed entrepreneurship program, which would teach inmates how to write business plans, market products or services, and set realistic goals for self-employment.

“Some of our inmates are incredibly creative and resourceful,” Johnson noted. “If we can help them channel that into something legitimate and sustainable, we’re not just helping them—we’re helping their families and their communities.”

Changing Lives, Changing Communities

While inmate turnover at the jail can be frequent and unpredictable, the impact of even a short-term program can be profound. Johnson recalls how even brief interactions with volunteers can serve as a lifeline.

“I would like to think that when they get out, if nothing else, they have got a resource or resources that they can reach out to,” she said. “If they do run into a hurdle, they’ve got someone they can call—a volunteer they met in here—who can help them get over that hurdle.”

The goal is simple but powerful: to give inmates a better chance at success when they return home and make Bradford County a stronger, safer community.

“I root for the underdogs. That’s who I love,” Johnson said. “And in this work, you see the potential in people who may have forgotten they had any.”

Work beginning on water storage ground tank

BY DAN HILDEBRAN
dan@bctelegraph.com

At press time, the City of Lake Butler said a contractor would begin work on the municipality’s water storage ground tank on June 3.

The city was initially awarded a $875,000 state grant to replace its current tank. However, three bids to replace the structure were over $1 million.

Lake Butler’s engineering firm, Mittalier, recommended refurbishing the utility’s current tank instead of replacing it to meet the city’s funding constraints, and persuaded the state’s Department of Environmental Protection to go along with the plan.

The city said in a notice, “Throughout construction, there may be a strange smell of sulfur or excessive chlorine that may be present until the project is completed.”

Tyson Woodland

Tyson “Bug” Woodland, a beloved son, brother, grandson, and friend, took his final ride on Thursday, May 29, 2025, leaving us far too soon at the young age of 18. Born on Nov. 16, 2006, in Gainesville, he was a true motoring enthusiast who couldn’t resist getting his hands greasy from the tender age of a kid. His lifelong passion for motors had everyone convinced he could fix anything with an engine, and probably a few things without one! Tyson was a proud graduate of Union County High School, class of 2025, where he not only mastered mechanics but also enjoyed playing baseball and being an active member of the FFA. Did we mention he was always the life of the party? With a contagious smile and a heart of gold, he never met a stranger. Kids adored him, and he returned the affection wholeheartedly, his joyful spirit lighting up any room he entered. In what can only be described as a well-rounded life, he had hobbies that included “mudding” with friends, riding four-wheelers, hunting, and indulging in a diet that included pickles, Dr. Pepper, and tomatoes, because who doesn’t? Simply put, he was a boy who lived life to the fullest and embraced every adventure with open arms.

Tyson’s family, who cherished him dearly, includes his father, Kendall (Veronica) Woodland and mother, Kelley Lane, all of Lake Butler; sisters, Harley and Avery Woodland of Keystone; grandparents, Woody and Regina Lane and Rick and Susan Brown, all of Worthington Springs; his “Meme,” Barbara Harrison; aunts and uncles, Kasey Adkins of Starke, Kristen Woodland of Lake City, Caytlyn (Justin) Denunzio of Lake Butler, Clay (FalyN) Halle of Lake Butler, Sadie Brown of Lake Butler and Alecia (Rob) Lukatz of Lake Butler; and his best friend, his dog, Bella.

Family and friends are invited to celebrate Tyson’s extraordinary life at a visitation and funeral service on Sunday, June 8, at Sardis Baptist Church in Worthington Springs. The visitation will start at 2 p.m., followed by the service at 3 p.m. He will be laid to rest at Elzey Chapel Cemetery.

Here’s to Bug. May we always remember the laughter, the kind-hearted spirit, and the adventures that define this incredible young man as we keep his memory alive in our hearts!

Andrew Thomas fired as UCHS football coach

BY CLIFF SMELLEY
cliff@bctelegraph.com

Union County Superintendent of Schools Mike Ripplinger announced on May 29 that Andrew Thomas would no longer be head football coach at Union County High School, ending a five-year stint that saw the Tigers win 77 percent of their games.

Ripplinger, in a statement emailed to media outlets, said, “In the best interest of the Union County High School football program — both in the immediate and long-term future — the decision was made to part ways with Head Coach Andrew Thomas. Union County is appreciative of the success Coach Thomas had during his tenure, and may he continue to have a successful career.

“An interim head coach will be named to lead the program through the next season as a search is conducted to find and hire the next head coach for the following spring.”

Lamar Waters was announced as the interim coach on June 2 (see related story).

Ripplinger didn’t say anything more specific regarding the firing during a May 30 interview with a Telegraph-Times-Monitor journalist, but did say his decision was based on “a combination of things over a period of time.”

“I believe most people who know me know that I don’t make rash decisions,” Ripplinger said. “I definitely would not have made a rash decision in this case.”

That’s not to say there weren’t some “sleepless nights,” Ripplinger said. After all, he was parting ways with a coach who went 46-14 over five years. Thomas’ UCHS teams had a 10-5 postseason record and advanced to at least the regional finals every season. The Tigers played in the state semifinals in 2022 and 2024.

“That was something I struggled with,” Ripplinger said.

Thomas, who has an overall record of 132-37 in 14 seasons (with stints at Trenton, Ocala’s Trinity Catholic and Brewton, Alabama’s T.R. Miller), released a statement via his Facebook account on May 31. Like Ripplinger, he didn’t offer any specifics as to why he was let go, but he did say “plenty more details will come when the time is right.” The coach added that he Andrew Thomas had a 46-14 record in five seasons at UCHS. His postseason record was 10-5 as the Tigers made the playoffs all five seasons, advancing to the state semifinals twice.

did nothing to deserve being fired and that he had nothing but “full support” from program boosters and the school board.

He reiterated that he would “elaborate at a later time.”

Ripplinger said he understands that the end of May is not when you want to make a coaching change in your football program.

“I admit that this is not the best timing at all,” Ripplinger said, “but at the end of the day, I made a decision based on what I believe is best for the student-athletes, both now and for the future.”

Five assistant coaches — Scott McDaniel, Kyle Presnick, Riley Reed, Craig Slocum and Travis Smith — resigned on June 2. All posted statements via their Facebook accounts, citing they disagreed with Ripplinger’s decision to fire Thomas.

“Today, with a heavy heart as a staff, we decided to take a stand for what is right and wrong and step aside from coaching football at UCHS,” Reed wrote.

Slocum wrote, “I didn’t like the way things were done and feel like things could have been handled differently.”

“I am unwilling to support a decision by county administrators that I felt was unwarranted and unfair,” McDaniel wrote. “My passion for coaching and my desire to help guide the young men in this program made this the most gut-wrenching decision of my career. My heart hurts, but wrong is wrong.”

Presnick wrote of the “very hard decision” and stressed that “I did not quit on the kids.”

“I am fighting for the kids because I do not believe that the direction that was taken for the program was the right one.”

Superintendent of Schools Mike Ripplinger said it was in the best interest of the football program — immediately and longterm — to part ways with Thomas.

Smith’s statement echoed the same sentiments.

“No, I am not quitting on the kids, but I did not agree with the direction the program was being pushed,” Smith wrote. “If I stayed on, I would be condoning the actions of our administration, which I will not do.”

Despite the situation, Reed expressed how much he has enjoyed coaching in Union.

“For five years, I’ve poured my heart and soul into this community,” Reed wrote. “This community has been nothing but amazing to me. These kids I’ve coached have changed my life, and hopefully I’ve made half an impact on them as they have on me. I have nothing but amazing things to say about this place. Sometimes God works in funny ways. While I may not agree with what is happening, I would not change the time I’ve spent here.”

Most of the coaches expressed that they’ll always love Union County and will always be Tigers.

Thomas gives thanks, highlights program success

As part of his Facebook statement, Thomas said, “I love Union County,” and added that “the amount of people that have reached out to me the past two days tells me all I need to know and gives me comfort that God has a plan.”

His statement would go on to describe how he enjoyed being in Union County and coaching for the Tigers.

Lamar Waters will be interim coach for the 2025 season

BY CLIFF SMELLEY
cliff@bctelegraph.com

Lamar Waters was named interim head football coach and athletic director at Union County High School on June 2, stepping in for Andrew Thomas, who was relieved of his duties on May 29.

Waters, who was a part of the staff in the spring after coaching and serving as athletic director in Williston, is no stranger. His family lived in Lake Butler before moving to Dunnellon, where Waters attended middle school and high school. Waters, who was a part of Robby Pruitt’s football staff at UCHS in the 1990s, has held multiple coaching positions in Union, including head coach of the Lake Butler Middle School football team and head coach of the UCHS baseball team.

“He has been part of multiple successful programs and has served as athletic director in other districts,” Union Superintendent of Schools Mike Ripplinger said via a statement emailed to the Telegraph-Times-Monitor. “Throughout his career, Coach Waters has spent many years in Union County and has developed many relationships over the years that will assist the program.”

Waters went from not even thinking he’d be coaching to now leading the UCHS football program. However, he was offered the opportunity to join the staff, which he did since his son Kanaan was playing.

His son was a big reason he felt he needed to step up and take on the interim role, but not the only reason.

“At the end of the day, I couldn’t leave him out there by himself,” Waters said. “That was a little selfish on my part. I didn’t want to leave my own son out there, but at the same time, I had made some connections in my short time (back) here with some of the other kids.

“No matter where I’ve been, I’ve always rooted for Union County, so I just thought it was something I needed to do.”

Waters, who graduated from Dunnellon High School and the University of Florida, had short coaching stints in Dunnellon and Hawthorne before joining Pruitt’s staff at UCHS. He later joined the staff of Bradford High School Head Football Coach Rowland Cummings, whom Waters coached alongside at Lamar Waters has coached multiple sports at UCHS, beginning with being an assistant on Robby Pruitt’s football staff in the 1990s.

UCHS. While at BHS, Waters also coached baseball as an assistant and served as head coach on three separate occasions following the resignation of other coaches.

He returned to Union, where he helped coach baseball and football at UCHS and served as head coach of the middle school football team. Waters was the UCHS head baseball coach for three seasons and also briefly filled in as athletic director during Head Football Coach Ronny Pruitt’s life-threatening illness in 2016.

A return to Bradford saw Waters fill the role of athletic director as well as helping to coach football.

Waters coached alongside Robby Pruitt again when Pruitt, after coaching for 20-plus years in Georgia, returned to Florida to take the head job at Williston in 2022.

His responsibilities as athletic director in Williston took up a lot of his time. He was ready to take advantage of an opportunity to return to Union when a teaching position opened up. That would allow him to see more of his family. His wife, Erin, already works in the school system and sons Kanaan and Kyson are Union students. Waters’ oldest son, Kale, graduated from UCHS in 2023.

“The people in Williston were very great and gracious to me, helping me out as much as possible, but I just wanted to be closer (to home),” Waters said. “I was starting to miss more stuff with my kids. I’ve given a lot of time to other people’s kids. It was just time to give a little bit more back to mine.”

Since becoming the UCHS interim coach, Waters has been busy hiring coaches after five assistants resigned (see related story). In talking to a Telegraph-Times-Monitor journalist on June 3, Waters said he was close to completing his staff and noted that it looked as if it would consist of some who played for the Tigers and some who’ve played and coached collegiately.

Waters said he and the program have already received great support in such a short period of time. He said he wasn’t sure if he was going to be able to feed players breakfast on the morning of June 3, as summer workouts are now underway. Now, it looks as if he may have someone providing breakfast and lunch for the remainder of the week and possibly for the whole summer.

Also, he said that many who work for the school district have offered to help in any way they can.

“I can’t say enough about how much people have helped us and how much the good Lord has blessed us,” Waters said.

Ripplinger said having an interim coach for 2025 will “give us time to get our resources together, not be in a rush and make a good decision.”

“Toward the end of the upcoming season, we will search for the best possible candidate who is out there to take over the team for the spring,” Ripplinger said.

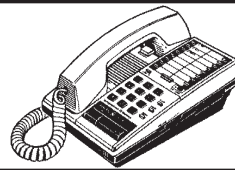

The superintendent added that “the type of coach we’re probably looking for is not the type who would just walk away from a program at this time of the year.”

As for Tiger football fans, Ripplinger encourages them to continue to support the program, the coaches and, most importantly, the players.

“The ones who always deserve our attention and support the most are the players,” Ripplinger said. “That should not change. They’re the ones who are out there working out all summer long and hitting during two-a-days and kind of going through the grind of the season.

“Regardless of what has occurred off the field, they still deserve our respect and our support on Friday nights and during the week.”

“I was drawn to coach in Union County because of its history for loving and supporting their football teams. And Union County did not disappoint. They did support and still are very supportive of the football team, my staff, my family and myself. No matter what the future holds for my family and me, Union County will always be very special to me.”

Thomas then focused on his family and coaching staff.

“While I gave this program my heart, it would not have been this successful without the help of my wife (Angel) and children,” he said. “Some are aware — but obviously some aren’t — how much time and effort and love my wife and family have put into the background of this program.

“I have also been very fortunate to have a wonderful coaching staff throughout the five years that’s changed year to year — different guys that have bought into our culture and some who have gone on to better themselves as professionals and new guys that have come in and loved and built on what we’ve done the last five years. They have worked far beyond the hours of their paycheck.”

Thomas said coaches’ jobs are to “turn boys into men, describing football as a “tough sport played by tough men.” That job is “harder and harder in this day and age,” Thomas said, but he expressed his gratitude for the student-athletes he coached.

“Without them and their true commitment and buy-in, then we don’t have what we’ve had.”

Thomas highlighted the program’s accomplishments since he was hired in 2020, including advancing three rounds deep into the postseason every year and the two state-semifinal appearances.

“We’ve won 10 playoff games in five years — equal to the previous 16 seasons combined,” Thomas said.

He also said during his time there the Tigers experienced the “best five-year run in Union County in 30 years,” which is correct regarding postseason success. The Tigers did win 51 of 60 games in 2011-15 under Ronny Pruitt, though their playoff record those years was 5-5.

Thomas mentioned program improvements, such as the field getting a new jumbotron and the locker room getting new legacy lockers and flooring. Also, the field house is being renovated.

“Most importantly,” Thomas said, is that 16 players have gotten opportunities to play in college.”

Thomas closed his statement by saying, “Apparently, this culture of success has been challenged and questioned, but I’m dang sure proud of it.”

Thomas was one of five finalists for the UCHS coaching position and was, according to Carlton Faulk, who was superintendent of schools, a unanimous selection by a committee composed of 10 members who represented five decades of UCHS football.

Fauk cited Thomas’ work ethic, moral character and small-town background as his biggest strengths.

Thomas, a 1995 Dixie County High School graduate who would go on to graduate from Florida State University, coached as an assistant at Newberry, Dixie and then Chiefland before taking on the head job at Trenton.

Trenton went 60-6 and won two state championships in Thomas’ five seasons there. The school experienced 13 postseason wins under Thomas after having just 10 all-time prior to his arrival.

Thomas left Trenton to take the head job at T.R. Miller High School in Brewton, Alabama. He coached there two seasons, going 13-8, before moving back to Florida, where he was hired as the head coach at Ocala’s Trinity Catholic.

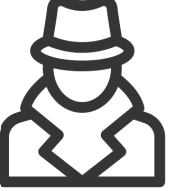

Trinity went 13-9 in two seasons before Thomas accepted the head job at UCHS.

The Tigers won at least eight games in each season under Thomas, with a 12-win season in 2021 and a 10-win season in 2024.

Sea-themed installation highlights Woman’s Club meeting

BY CLIFF SMELLEY
cliff@bctelegraph.com

The installation of officers for the Woman’s Club of Starke was a cause for shell-abration, if you will.

General Federation of Women’s Clubs Florida District 4 Director Terry Laws conducted the installation at the club’s May 14 meeting, using a theme of “Gifts from the Sea” and highlighting each position with a particular seashell.

“The ocean is filled with many wonders,” said Laws, who’s a member of Jacksonville’s Lakeshore Woman’s Club. “Among these wonders are found beautiful and useful sea animals — their homes are known to us as seashells. There are lessons to be learned from our ocean friends, and today, I’d like to present a gift from the sea to each one of you to remind you of the office that you are to hold next year.”

Laws began by presenting President Sheila Barnes with a conch shell, saying, “In the olden days, this shell was often used as a trumpet, perhaps to herald the beginning of a meeting or to give notice of a gathering. Appropriately enough, one kind of conch is known as the queen conch for its qualities.”

Barnes will preside over club and executive-board meetings as well as serve as the club’s official delegate at district and state meetings, Laws said, adding, “May you, madame president, let this shell remind you that your club has elected you because of your leadership qualities.”

First Vice President Cindy Little was presented with a clam shell.

“Clams live in the midst of many coral animals and at times with sea plants and animals actually living on the clams’ shells,” Laws said.

After explaining that Little’s duties would include assuming the president’s duties in her absence, arranging programs for monthly meetings, handling annual reporting and promoting the club’s service in the area of arts and culture, environment and education and libraries, Laws said, “Like the clam, you will help others to thrive as they join your group, and you, too, will gain by having many members around you.”

Laws presented Second Vice President Lisa Rodgers with a murex shell, saying, “The murex has a hard shell and strong spines. You shall serve the duties of the president or first vice president as needed. You shall be over membership, health and wellness, and civic engagement.

“Like the murex, you will be strong in promoting your club’s functions.”

As she presented Third Vice President Cleo Elder with a cone shell, Laws said, “These shells are the favorite of many collectors and are considered some of the most highly valuable shells in the world. You shall serve the duties of the president or first vice president or second vice president as needed. You shall be responsible for fundraising and service projects, which shall include education.

“May the thought of this valuable shell encourage you in this position.”

Lori Thompson’s office of fourth vice president was represented by a cowrie shell. Thompson wasn’t present, but the script Laws went by described the cowrie shell as being “as smooth on the outside as it is on the inside” and that the shells were valuable and used by fur traders.

With the fourth vice president being responsible for social activities and the house and grounds, the cowrie shell is to serve as a reminder that the role makes her “valuable to us all.”

Recording Secretary Jejetta Lee was presented with a scallop shell.

“This type of shellfish travels by a kind of jet propulsion,” Laws said. “After the shell opens and closes, a jet of escaping water pushes the scallop forward.

“As you accurately record the minutes of the executive board and club meetings, you will perform quickly and efficiently. You shall be the custodian of all official documents and papers and the preparing of the yearbook.

“May this shell remind you of your responsibilities.”

Laws presented Corresponding Secretary Jaelyn Jackson with an auger shell, saying, “These high-spined shells have many whorls, which wind down, resembling a writing tool. They are said to inspire intuition.

“You shall attend to all the correspondence of the organization. You shall give notice to the election of new members and publish the newsletter.

“May you remember this shell when you correspond with others as you represent the organization, and may you always have your heart in your job.”

Treasurer Linda Lee received a quahog shell.

“Many years ago, Indians used this shell animal for two purposes — for food and as money,” Laws said. “May you be reminded to be useful to your organization, and may the quahog especially remind you to be cautious as you handle the finances. You shall keep a record of all income and expenses. You shall hold all monies and keep records of all receipts and disbursements and make a monthly, written report. You shall submit your records to the auditor at the end of the year.”

In conclusion, Laws told the officers they were only a part of the club.

“May each one of you do your part, and may the rest of you do your part, so that you can function effectively, harmoniously and joyfully, as do our friends from the sea,” Laws said.

President’s awards

Barnes, who has already been serving in the role of president, presented awards to several club members, starting with Charnelle Whittemore, a past president she described as a mentor and one who “took the time to take this club into her hands and run it for four solid years, and through blood, sweat and tears has really made an impact — not only on the club, but on me as well.”

“She’s a great friend to me,” Barnes said, adding, “I just love her with all my heart, so this year’s Woman of the Year award goes to my beautiful friend, Charnelle Whittemore.”

Barnes presented Little with an Outstanding Service Award, saying, “This young lady has been by my side. When I first asked her to be a part of the team and sit on the board with me as my right-hand woman, she was like, ‘As long as you’re doing it, I’ll do it with you.’

“She’s been a go-getter. She keeps our prayer requests going. She reaches out and keeps our socials going. She’s always asking questions to keep our minds open on the board, so we come up with new ideas and do new things.”

Jackson received a Leadership in Excellence Award, with Barnes saying that Jackson “jumped in” and took on such roles as chairing the arts and culture committee and being involved in multiple projects as well as the General Federation of Women’s Clubs District 4 arts-and-crafts event.

In presenting Charlotte Williams with a Spirit Award, Barnes said, “She’s there with us for everything. If we need something, all we do is call Miss Charlotte, and she will do the best that she can.”

Monterey Wasdin, who Barnes said has “been a blessing to our club,” received a Lifetime Achievement Award, while Rodgers was presented with a Community Impact Award.

“She has chaired our civic engagement and outreach committee,” Barnes said of Rodgers. “She’s always volunteering.”

Elder was presented with a Fundraising Champion Award following a year in which the club raised more than $18,000.

“This lady never wants to be recognized,” Barnes said, “but she’s always there, willing to help. When I jumped in as fundraising chair, she was right there by my side, helping me sell those tickets and helping me get things done.

“Now, we’re helping her as much as we possibly can.”

In presenting Lorie Riley with a Creative Vision Award, Barnes described Riley as “very creative” and noted how she, as a new club member, co-chaired the arts and culture committee and assisted with the production and sound for the club’s “Drinking Habits” play.

Jejetta Lee received a Behind the Scenes Award.

“She’s very quiet, but she serves on our board, and she’s always making sure we’ve got our reports in as far as the minutes to our board meetings, minutes for the luncheons and things like that,” Barnes said.

In presenting Brenda Bell with a Best New Member Award, Barnes said, “She has joined forces with Ms. Lisa (Rodgers), helping volunteer with our civic engagement and outreach programs. She helps with the disadvantaged. Anytime we need her, she shows up. She’s helping bring food in, put food on the table, clean up, put chairs away — whatever needs to be done.”

Penny Pearson-Yaxley received a Most Cheerful Member Award.

“Anytime I’ve ever come to this club, this woman has a smile on her face, and she greets people with a smile,” Barnes said.

Barnes’ final presentation was the Problem Solver Award, which went to Linda Lee.

“Anytime I need a question answered, she will answer me,” Barnes said.

FWC asks for reports of wild turkey sightings until Aug. 31

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission is asking Florida residents and visitors to report all sightings of wild turkeys between now and Aug. 31. This includes hens, poults (newly hatched wild turkeys) and gobblers. Florida's annual summer wild turkey survey is part of a broader multi-state initiative aimed at better understanding the reproductive success and abundance of wild turkeys. This survey helps determine wild turkey nesting success, poult survival and population distribution and abundance, which is crucial information that FWC biologists need to manage and sustain healthy wild turkey populations for years to come. Nests typically begin to hatch in late spring and continue into the summer. However, nesting success can vary each year based on several factors, including weather conditions, predation and habitat quality. Fluctuations in nesting success and poult survival can strongly influence wild turkey populations. By reporting wild turkey sightings, Floridians and visitors can help biologists estimate population metrics at statewide and regional levels. To learn more and start reporting, visit MyFWC.com/hunting/turkey.
