Need for foster parents in Baker, Bradford and Union

Today in the north central Florida Region, there are 201 licensed foster homes across 13 counties. There is a need for an additional 65 homes to assure that every child that enters the foster care system receives the individualized care and support that they deserve. Good foster families, just like all families, come in all different shapes and sizes. From the individual in their late twenties with the energy of youth to the retiree with extra time, Partnership for Strong Families is looking for individuals and couples who are willing to say yes to becoming a foster parent.

“Each day, children and teens are removed from everything familiar and enter foster care,” said Ginger Griffeth, CEO of Partnership for Strong Families. “In those moments, what they need most is a safe, loving home — a place of comfort and stability — while their parents work hard alongside PSF to heal and make the changes needed to bring their children home safely.”

PSF has a team of dedicated professionals tasked with recruiting new foster parents and providing the supports that foster parents need. PSF ensures that foster parents are an integral part of the child welfare process and receive the support and recognition they deserve. “Foster parents are the heart of child welfare.” said Carol Ruth, chief of Placement and Caregiver Support. “They step up to open their home and their hearts to serve children in a most incredible way. The difference foster families can make in the life of a child is immeasurable.”

Throughout the month of May, PSF is offering several opportunities for individuals and families interested in fostering. There are three online info sessions scheduled. They will be held on May 15, 21 and 27. More information can be found on www.pfsf.org or by contacting PSF at HopePartner@pfsf.org or 352-244-1615.

Local Entrepreneurs Spark Community Spirit at Spring Sip-n-Shop

BY AMBER J. CRAFT
Special to the Telegraph

Downtown Call Street came alive with color, creativity, and community spirit during the Spring Sip-n-Shop, held on April 26th at Hometown Grounds. This vibrant gathering of local vendors was a warm celebration of small businesses and hometown heart, hosted in a welcoming space provided by Amy Polk, owner of the coffee shop at the corner of Call and Thompson streets.

Customers wandered in for their favorite brew and left with so much more—original artwork, handmade skincare products, and even permanent jewelry that symbolized life’s special milestones.

The event offered not only a chance to support local makers but also a glimpse into the passion and purpose that fuels small-town entrepreneurs.

From Coffee to Creativity

The idea behind Sip-n-Shop is simple: bring the community together to enjoy a cup of coffee while browsing one-of-a-kind creations made by people who live and work in the area. For many shoppers, it was a reminder that meaningful products don’t have to be shipped from across the world—they’re being handcrafted just down the road.

Polk, dedicated to local

businesses, opened Hometown Grounds as a hub for connection, and this event exemplified that mission. Her coffee shop served as a backdrop for the event, offering a steady stream of coffee, conversation, and community pride.

Children struggled with eczema and allergies

One vendor at the event was Courtney Crawford, owner of Homemaker and An Acre, LLC. Her table was filled with natural living products, each one rooted out in the sun, they’re in the dirt,” she explained. “They’re not in cement buildings with no sunlight.”

As the family began butchering at home, Crawford discovered the potential of the rendered lard. “I started making the lard balms, which is a healing balm. I make lard diaper cream, magnesium creams that help with sleep and achy muscles, and things like that,” she shared.

The family also keeps goats for milk and raises chickens for eggs.

“My daughter can eat 10 eggs in one sitting at home with no problem,” the homemaker said, despite previously alarming reactions to restaurant eggs.

Since 2018, Crawford has been experimenting with natural alternatives, and this year, she’s offering those solutions to others through her business. Shoppers can now find her products locally at Hometown Grounds or order online through her website: homemakerandanacre.com

Get Linxed Permanent Jewelry

Another enterprise featured at the event was Get Linxed, owned by Taylor Combs. With about 50 chain styles and 25 connector options, Combs’s permanent jewelry offerings add a touch of lasting sparkle to everyday life.

Permanent jewelry is a bracelet, anklet, necklace, or other piece that is custom-fitted to the customer’s body and then welded closed, creating a clasplless piece that’s intended to be worn indefinitely.

Combs said the concept is as practical as it is beautiful.

“You can swim, bathe, tan in them,” Combs explained. “They don’t require any upkeep or cleaning. I do nothing with mine, and they’ve been fine for over two years now.”

Combs began her business in May 2023 after purchasing a few pieces for herself and becoming intrigued by the growing trend.

“Honestly, I’ve always been someone who’s had a side gig,” she explained. “So, I looked into it, bought the machine, and haven’t looked back since.”

Combs realized her jewelry could represent something more significant—memories, milestones, even healing.

“I like that I don’t have to remember to put it on. Like today, I was in a rush and forgot to put on my watch and my rings,” she said, underscoring the convenience. “Everyone says it’s addicting and they just like that it’s there.”

Combs’s customers span generations.

“I’ve done it on kids as young as 18 months to my grandma, who’s 86. It’s for every age.”

She also caters to men and offers mail-order options for those who want to gift jewelry.

“Recently,” she concluded, “I started pre-making jewelry with clasps, and I mail it out, and if they decide they want to make it permanent, I’ll weld it for them.”

Peggy House Maltman

The arts were also represented through the work of local artist Peggy House Maltman, whose sister displayed several of her pieces at the event.

Peggy’s artwork remains on display at Hometown Grounds, offering a consistent connection to local talent long after the event had ended.

Peggy’s work reflects not just artistic skill but also a deep love for the community she calls home. Her presence—even by proxy—was a beautiful reminder that the arts are alive and well in Call Street.

Turf Talk:
Choosing the right grass for your yard

BY LUKE HARLOW
UF/IFAS Bradford Extension

Whether we use our lawns for throwing a ball with our kids or enjoying the bird watching from the porch, we want to make sure our landscape is healthy and looks good.

Sometimes in northeast Florida this isn't the easiest thing to accomplish. Drought, insects, plant disease, poorly selected plants and mismanagement all contribute to why lawns may not be performing well.

If you are looking to select or improve your lawn, I can guarantee that there is no perfect grass to select. Each one has its own benefits and disadvantages. In general, we have about five different species of grass that are typically used for perennial lawns, meaning they will grow over many seasons. These include St. Augustine, Bermuda, Bahia, Centipede and Zoysia grass.

If you grew up outside of Florida, especially in the northern states, you may be familiar with fescue or Kentucky blue grass. Unfortunately, these grasses do not grow in our climate and are not recommended to try in Florida.

Speaking of seed, only certain grasses will be successful by seed in Florida, including Bahia grass, centipede grass and, with certain restrictions, zoysia grass. The other main ways for establishing a lawn will be by sod or plugs.

Seeding is usually cheaper but will need more diligence with establishing your grass. Sod or plugs give you an advantage as it is already grown grass cut into squares that can be laid out, but sod is generally more expensive than seed.

New St. Augustine grass one month after being laid down.

Any of these options will need special care until the roots are fully latched into the ground. Watering will be key to the success or failure of making sure the grass will survive. If using sod, once it is installed, the grass should be watered for 15 mins twice per day, every day for about two weeks, adjusting with rainfall.

At the start, the sod has no roots, so you do not need to water for long, as you are just trying to maintain moisture for the sod. As roots grow, you can reduce the number of times watered after two weeks and increase the time to allow the water to creep down into the soil where the roots are.

If you want to change from the plain greenery of turfgrass, there are alternative options for lawns including perennial peanut, sunshine mimosa, frogfruit and twin flower. These alternatives depending on the site conditions can be great additions to provide a change of color and add flowers to your yard for pollinators and butterflies. Each one has its own benefits and disadvantages as well.

If you are interested in any turfgrass or alternatives, you can contact me directly for more information and guidance on installing these on your property.

Kramer to receive inaugural Pillars of Service honor

BY CLIFF SMELLEY
cliff@bctelegraph.com

Chuck Kramer is Bradford County's first honoree as part of the Santa Fe College Foundation's newly created Pillars of Service awards program, which will be presented annually to residents of Alachua and Bradford counties in recognition of their impacts on their communities and on the college.

Kramer, who is the general manager of Starke radio station WEAG-FM 106.3, which he and his family own, will be presented with the award during a luncheon on Friday, May 23, at the Hilton University of Florida Conference Center in Gainesville.

"There's always somebody out there who, in my way of thinking, would have been more deserving of it," said Kramer, who admitted he was "still very shocked and humbled" by being announced as a recipient of the inaugural award.

Kramer found out he was to be an honoree when he received a phone call from Santa Fe College President Paul Broadie. Kramer, who was wrapping up his morning show, said he couldn't believe it was really Broadie and that he was to be a Pillars of Service recipient. He asked Broadie, "Is this a joke?"

To prove that he was indeed who he said he was and that it was no joke, Broadie visited WEAG the following day and, in Kramer's words, said, "I just want you to know I'm Mr. Broadie. It's not a hoax. You really did get this."

Pillars of Service replaces the Women of Distinction awards program, which was retired after 37 years.

"This is the first time they've actually included the men,"

Kramer said. "This is the first of Bradford County recipient, who happens to be a guy and who happens to be me. It's like, 'They really couldn't come up with somebody before me?'"

Yet Kramer has impacted his community in a variety of ways. Part of the nomination letter Santa Fe College received on his behalf read: "Chuck Kramer's unwavering commitment to education, community service and historical preservation exemplifies the qualities celebrated by the Pillars of Service awards. His leadership, volunteerism and advocacy have made a significant impact on Santa Fe College and the Bradford County community."

Kramer's community involvement has included serving on the board for the Arc of Bradford, being a member of the Bradford County Tourist Development Council and serving as the lead docent for the Eugene L. Matthews Bradford County Historical Museum.

The museum, which Kramer described as "a labor of love," is housed rent-free in a portion of the second floor of Santa Fe College's Cultural Building at 201 E. Call St. in Starke.

In an Oct. 3, 2019, Telegraph-Times-Monitor story, Kramer's wife, Mary, talked of how her husband sometimes works all day at the station after his on-air duties as host of the station's weekday morning show end, only to then leave the station and go to a meeting of one of the organizations he's involved with.

"He does a lot, and he doesn't expect anything back," Mary Kramer said.

Former Bradford County Supervisor of Elections Terry Vaughan was the WEAG morning-show host before Kramer was hired 34 years ago. Kramer and his family moved from New Jersey.

"He was very eager to assimilate himself in this community and has become an icon," Vaughan was quoted as saying in the Oct. 3, 2019, Telegraph-Times-Monitor story.

Kramer said it was easy for him to become a part of the community. He said he was never treated as an outsider.

"I felt at home very early," said Kramer, giving credit to people like Vaughan as well as former WEAG owners Ben and Ruth Dickerson.

Besides his community involvement, Kramer has also been an advocate for Santa Fe College, which has centers in Starke to complement its main campus in Gainesville. He and his wife will have a lasting impact on the college after creating an endowed scholarship in memory of their daughter Danielle, who attended Santa Fe and passed away at the age of 20 as the result of a traffic crash in 2007.

The scholarship was endowed 16 years ago. Kramer said it was former Santa Fe College Andrews Center Director Cheryl Canova who approached him and his wife about the idea.

"Every two years, Mary and I get called into the (Andrews Center) boardroom, and we get to help pick out a student who's eligible to receive the scholarship," Kramer said.

Besides Kramer, recipients of the inaugural Pillars of Service Awards are:

—Climb for Cancer Foundation, a Gainesville organization founded by husband-and-wife Ron and Dianne Farb that has supported individuals with cancer (and their families) for 20 years. The couple also created the B. Dianne Farb Healthcare Education Scholarship for students diagnosed with cancer.

—Héctor Puig of Gainesville's Héctor Picture Framing and Gallery, who artwork donations fill the halls at Santa Fe College and help shine a light on the importance of art on education.

—Kristina Ramer, a Gainesville editor and writer who is cataloging the Héctor Puig collection to ensure its lasting impact.

—Santa Fe College student

Katie Belanger, a wheelchair user whose advocacy has led to greater accessibility for those with disabilities in the community and at Santa Fe.

Karmer had the chance to attend a luncheon and meet his fellow honorees. He said he was especially impressed with Belanger.

"She gets her voice heard," Kramer said, adding "She's set up things that will be long appreciated after she's gone."

It was apparent to Kramer, though, that every honoree "truly has a love for the community and the college."

Pillars of Service will support a $250,000 fundraising initiative launched in 2024 for program enhancements, state-of-the-art equipment and scholarships.

The former Women of Distinction awards honored more than 190 women in Alachua and Bradford counties during its 37 years of existence. In 2014, the Women of Distinction honorees began raising funds to establish the first Woman of Distinction Scholarship. The first award was given for the 2015-16 academic year. The 2022 goal was to complete a fifth scholarship, totaling an endowment of $250,000 to support and mentor women in perpetuity.

Broadie, at the 2023 Women of Distinction luncheon, announced that the scholarship fundraising goal had been exceeded, saying that more than $265,000 had been raised to create scholarships.

"Our Women of Distinction award recipients will always hold a place of honor at Santa Fe College," said Santa Fe College's Sherry Houston, who is vice president for Advancement and chief philanthropy officer. "We will build on their legacy with Pillars of Service."
